Rowers finish second

By Brad Kuhn

Daily Nebraskan Staff Reporter

Nebraska's novice heavyweight men's crew capped an undefeated fall racing season Sunday, leaving Midwest rival Kansas in their wake at the first annual University of Nebraska Fall Regatta.

Unfortunately, the Huskers finished second to Kansas in many of the other events.

A surprisingly large crowd of 500 spectators packed the grandstand and parking lot at the Capitol Beach Marina. The crowd was one of the biggest at any Midwest rowing event, with the possible exception of the Midwest Rowing Championships in Madison, Wis.

Kansas won the regatta, stroking to four firsts and four second-place finishes. Minnesota's women's crew finished second with three firsts and a second. Nebraska finished third with two firsts and three seconds.

Nebraska's novice men's heavyweight-eight posted the fastest time of the day, blasting down the 1,100 meter course in 3 minutes, 21 seconds with the wind at its back in a preliminary heat. On flat water, the novice heavies won the final with a time of 3 minutes, 45 seconds, only 15 seconds behind the winning varsity time and 4 seconds behind the Nebraska varsity finish.

The eight, coxed by Cathy Asleson, a sophomore from Omaha, was rowed by: Bob Taylor, Gregg Brettman, Tim Manhart, Walt Price, Todd Breedlove, Eric Rhodes, Mike Olson and stroke Mike Stuchlik.

Nebraska's other first-place finish came late in the day, long after the crowd had gone home for supper. Denise Varner and Lynne Gillaspie won the women's varsity pair race after a near-collision on their way to the starting line. The two apparently strayed onto the race course, halting a race in progress and nearly disqualifying themselves.
