Ottoson...

Ottoson said he wants to leave the universitywide administrative computing service on a "sound financial footing." A reorganization of the university computing service was necessary after the division of the academic and administrative computing services. Getting the administrative computing organized requires "a lot of financial juggling," he said.

Ottoson said he would like to see the development of the student information system — the computer system handling of student data. UNL has an incomplete system. UNL's old system needs to be replaced and the NU Medical Center's system needs to be developed, he said.

As dean of the graduate college, Ottoson said he also would like to see more research funds, graduate assistance and fellowship scholarships given to graduate study.

Overall, Ottoson said, he is pleased with what he has accomplished at the university. He will maintain his close association with the university, particularly with the Institute, he said.

Ottoson said he looks forward to some time for himself and his wife, Margaret. They plan to travel and spend some time in their summer home in Ottoson's hometown near Detroit Lakes, Minn.

Ottoson said he plans to write several books in addition to the more than 50 books and papers he already has written. Most of all, he said he is happy that he will have the time to devote to research — his "first love."

Building deficiencies warrant Mission move

By Barbara Comito
Daily Nebraskan Staff Reporter

"Overcrowded conditions, fire and building code deficiencies and antiquated facilities" are the reasons the People's City Mission's plans to move to First and "Q" streets, according to Steve Janovec, mission director.

The decision to relocate came three years after the mission's board of directors decided the 76-year-old site at 124 S. Ninth St. was no longer adequate. Several possible sites were rejected.

From 1980 to 1984, at its present location, the mission has had to handle an increase in services of about 400 percent, Janovec said. But the rise in services should level off, he said.

The 40-bed dormitory is in violation of housing requirements because too many beds are in the allocated space, Janovec said. The mission might house as many as 62 men a night, he said. In which case some men sleep on the floor.

In 1980, the family shelter was moved into the Ninth Street location from a less workable location at 48th and Adams streets, placing greater demands on available space.

The new location will provide more privacy to men in the restoration and renewal program — men staying at the mission for an extended period of time because of an expressed desire for self-improvement — as well as alleviating crowded conditions.

Janovec said he would like to dispel the myth that the reason the mission is moving is because downtown businesses want it out.

Over Thanksgiving

Although there will be a mass exodus of UNL students from Lincoln for the Thanksgiving holiday, some students will be staying in Lincoln or on campus.

Students living in the graduate section of Selleck Quadrangle and Piper Hall, including International House, will be allowed to stay after the other residence halls close at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Residence Hall food service will serve lunch today as the last meal before Thanksgiving.

The residence halls will reopen at 1 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 25. The first meal served will be breakfast on Monday, Nov. 26.

The People's City Mission, 124 S. Ninth St., will be serving a Thanksgiving Day dinner. There will be a chapel service at 11:30 a.m. followed by the dinner at noon. Any family or single person not having a place to go for Thanksgiving dinner is welcome.

Bennett Martin Public Library and all branches of the Lincoln city library system will be closed for Thanksgiving Thursday and Friday.

The Nebraska state Capitol will be closed Thursday and Friday in observance of Thanksgiving.

The building will be open Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m., with tours being offered from 1 to 4 p.m. on the hour.

Thrift stores override the pocketbook veto

Have you ever selected a $72 cashmere sweater from a clothes rack and put it back because "it just wasn't for you" — when, in all honesty, it just wasn't for your pocket book?

Would you believe that genuine cashmeres can be found right here in Lincoln for as low as $1.25?

UNL sophomore Peggy Brown believes it and has an inexpensive wardrobe to prove it.

Shopping at stores like Blondies, the Salvation Army and the Disabled American Veterans thrift store, 821 N. 27th St., Brown spends $1 to $1.25 for sweaters, 50 cents for sweatshirts and 75 cents for dresses.

Freshman Kim Gaskill, acquainted with similar stores in Omaha, has spent 25 cents on blue, red and pink cardigan sweaters.

Gaskill also finds sweatshirts ranging from 25 cents to $1. "Sometimes they have paint on them," she said, but she just turns them inside out.

Brown once spent $6 at a thrift store and walked out with a couple of sweaters, a belt, a hat, a pair of sunglasses and a man's shirt.

For $1.95, Brown once bought a black, full-length cashmere coat.

"And the places have sales if you can believe that," Brown said.

During a Bag Sale, the Salvation Army, 737 P St., will give customers big brown bags, Brown said. And for $1, shoppers can buy as much as the bag will hold.

Like the DAV merchandise, all Salvation Army stock is donated, said Salvation Army employee June Schmidt.

After receiving the donations, six people in the sorting room price the merchandise. Schmidt said on the average, sweaters run from $2 to $4. Some of the merchandise is even new, Schmidt said.

Debbie, a DAV employee, said shoppers can find jewelry from 6 cents to $3.99. Prices for sweaters range from 76 cents to $5.99. Jeans cost from 46 cents to $8.99, and coats range from 96 cents to $29.95.

"We get quite a few college students," Schmidt said. While some try to inexpensively expand their wardrobe, others look for costumes they can wear to parties. Older styles from the '50s and Hawaii styles are popular costume purchases, Schmidt said.
