Moore supports Hoppen, Huskers tame Bobcats

Harvey Marshall started the engine Monday night, and Dave Hoppen, Curtis Moore and Bill Jackman kept it running as the Nebraska basketball team sped past Montana State, 86-65.

The 6-11 Hoppen led Nebraska with 23 points, and forwards Moore and Jackman finished with 21 and 18 respectively to lead the Cornhuskers to their third win against no losses this season.

Although he would be plagued by shooting problems later in the game, Marshall helped Nebraska off to a fast start. The 6-3 transfer canned three of his first four shots to help the Huskers take a 17-6 lead. The Huskers never looked back.

Montana State cut the lead to 19-13 with 11:57 left in the half, but Moore got the Huskers back on track with an alley-oop slam dunk. Freshman guard Joel Sealer fed Moore with a perfect pass on the play.

"We design that all the time," Moore said of the alley-oop play. "It's going to be there as long as I'm around."

Hoppen outplayed Montana State's two big men, 6-11 Tryg Johnson and 7-0 Greg Walters, for one of the game's telling factors. Hoppen scored 16 points in the first half. Johnson, the Bobcats' starting center, finished with 2 points and fouled out with 17:30 left in the game. Walters finished with 14 points to lead Montana State.

Montana State coach Stu Starner started both Walters and Johnson for the first time this season.

"We started those big guys because we were playing against Dave Hoppen," Starner said. "He's got to be one of the top two or three centers in the country. When Tryg Johnson got into the foul trouble, the game was over for us."

Nebraska led 48-33 at halftime and extended that lead to 20 with 15 minutes left after a 7-point string. Montana State responded with 7 straight of their own, paced by the outside shooting of all-conference guard Jeff Epperly, who had missed all four of his first half shots.

But Nebraska turned that attack back with a Jackman one-hander in the lane, a long shot from Brian Carr and a 12-foot pull up by Joel Sealer on a break.

Then it was show time again for Curtis Moore. Sealer led another break but had to outrun Bobcat guard Troy Hampton for the basket. Hampton forced him outside, but just as Sealer appeared to be going out of bounds, he scooped the ball with one hand backwards to the trailing Moore, who put down his eighth jam in two nights over a flat-footed Hampton.

Nebraska's offense then began to show the wear of the three games in five days stretch. The Huskers scored only six points over the next six minutes while the Bobcats scored 11. On defense, the Huskers were committing several unnecessary fouls and letting the Bobcats get offensive rebounds for the first time all night. But, Nebraska went back to Jackman (three baskets) and Moore (two) to close it out.

"We were well prepared for them. We knew what kind of things they would do," Starner said. "But they took advantage of us at forward early and just overpowered us. They've got a very, very good team."

Nebraska will play Creighton Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Omaha.

Women cagers bow to rated teams

By Rich Cooper

The Nebraska women's basketball victory tour got off to an unspectacular start last weekend as the Huskers dropped two games in the Minnesota Dial Classic Tournament.

The Huskers lost to Minnesota 90-79 and to 14th-ranked Tennessee 77-58. Fourth-ranked Northeast Louisiana won the tournament championship by beating Minnesota 82-66.

Nebraska coach Kelly Hill said her team played well but just did not have the height to match the other teams.

Terry Parriott led Nebraska with 36 points in the two games. "Until the tournament she was in a bad slump, but she played very well," Hill said.

Hill said the thing that hurt the Huskers most was lack of height. Minnesota had blocked shots against the Huskers.

In the consolation game, Tennessee beat the Huskers with a strong full-court press and a fast transition game.

"We just could not get any shots off against Tennessee," Hill said. "We knew going into the game that this would probably be the toughest full-court pressure that we would face all year, but we learned from the experience." Debra Powell had only nine points. The leading scorer for the Huskers, Parriott, had only 12 points.

Maurtice Ivy played little because of muscle strain in her left thigh. She is questionable for the Creighton game Saturday afternoon.

Hill said she hopes her team will not get down about their 1-3 pre-season record.

"Some of the girls that have just started playing for us might not be used to losing, especially if they played for a high school team that only lost two games in three years," Hill said.

Spikers travel to Michigan

The Nebraska volleyball team will travel to Kalamazoo, Mich., Saturday to face Western Michigan in the Mideast Regionals of the NCAA volleyball tournament.

The Huskers lost 15-9, 12-15, 12-15, 8-15 to the Broncos in the first round last season. Western Michigan was undefeated at the time, and drew a crowd of 8,543 to the match, still an NCAA record.

This season, the Broncos are 26-7, despite a starting lineup of two juniors, three sophomores and a freshman. The Broncos beat Illinois State in four sets to earn the spot in the Regionals.

Nebraska beat Pittsburgh 15-6, 15-10, 18-16 in Lincoln Saturday.

The Husker-Bronco match will begin at 5 p.m., while Penn State (30-5) will face Pacific at 7:30 p.m. Penn State defeated Pacific in California 15-13, 2-15, 15-12, 8-15, 16-14 while the Tigers were ranked No. 1.
