Chicago nativity scene causes city hall clash

CHICAGO — The warring factions in Chicago's City Hall were at it again Tuesday, this time arguing over a Nativity scene. The creche, a Christmas-season fixture in the City Hall lobby for 30 years, appeared as usual this year. But was banished to its packing crate last weekend on orders from Mayor Harold Washington.

A spokesman for the mayor said it was taken down "in response to numerous complaints" from non-Christian religious groups. Some members of the old-line Democratic Party who form a majority on the City Council and with whom the reform-minded Washington has been battling for two years, accused Washington of being a "scrooge."

Alderman Edward Burke suggested that the Rev. Louis Farrakhan, controversial leader of the Nation of Islam, is behind it all. A mayoral aide accused Burke of "speaking from fear or ignorance."

Earlier this year the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that city-sponsored Nativity scenes do not violate the Constitution's guarantee of church-state separation.

U.S.: Iran 'encouraged' hijackers

WASHINGTON — The White House Tuesday accused Iran of actions that encouraged the hijackers of a Kuwait airliner who murdered two American hostages and called on the Iranian government to prosecute the hijackers or extradite them to Kuwait.

President Reagan, speaking briefly with reporters, said that even if they weren't "in collusion, the Iranians could have done better."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the Iranian authorities should have shot out the plane's tires soon after it landed in Tehran and should not have let the hijack drama drag on for six days before using an assault team to rescue the hostages.

Passengers and crew aboard the plane were rescued when Iranian security men disguised as maintenance workers stormed the craft Sunday night. Speakes said conclusions would be reached after two rescued Americans, who left Tehran Tuesday, had been interviewed by U.S. officials.

Health worker contracts AIDS

BOSTON — A medical laboratory worker was diagnosed here Tuesday as having AIDS in what doctors say may be the first case in the United States involving a victim who contracted the disease from his work.

The unidentified man is in intensive care at the New England Medical Center. A center spokeswoman quoted doctors as saying "some of the blood (in the man's work place) was probably from people with a high risk of AIDS."

The man is not a homosexual, a drug user, a hemophiliac or of Haitian origin. These groups are the most prone to the AIDS virus, which destroys the body's ability to fight disease and has afflicted more than 6,000 people in the United States.

A spokeswoman for the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said this case was believed to be the first in the United States involving someone who had worked either close to AIDS victims or to testing facilities involving their blood. Officials are trying to find the laboratory where he worked.

U.N. repeats call for Mid-East talks

UNITED NATIONS — The U.N. General Assembly, over the objections of Israel, the United States and Canada, Tuesday reiterated its call for an international peace conference on the Middle East.

Several other Western members have questioned the utility of the proposal, which would seat the Palestine Liberation Organization at the table. A total of 121 countries voted for the resolution. The resolution was one of four adopted by the General Assembly at the conclusion of a lengthy debate on an agenda item titled "Question of Palestine." The others were mainly technical in nature.

The United States and Israel opposed all of the drafts, and Canada objected to three of the texts.

Earlier, Israeli Ambassador Benjamin Netanyahu told the General Assembly that only direct bilateral negotiations had any chance of success, as was shown by the Camp David talks, which led to a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

"The call by the Soviet Union, among others, for an international conference is simply a ploy to provide a forum, perhaps I should say a coliseum, in which Israel can be thrown to the lions and the PLO legitimized," Netanyahu stated.

Shultz launches NATO meeting

LONDON — Secretary of State George Shultz met with his British counterpart Tuesday to launch a series of talks with NATO allies expected to cover the line the West should take on nuclear disarmament.

U.S. officials in Washington billed Shultz's European trip as an opportunity to discuss his meeting next month with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, at which he hopes to revive a disarmament dialogue with Moscow. Shultz will meet other NATO officials at the alliance's foreign ministers' meeting in Brussels this week.
