Setting it Straight

An article in Tuesday's Daily Nebraskan on Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Janet Krause contained several mistakes. Krause's doctorate is in English, her parents did not attend UNL and her daughter-in-law works for the legal department of The Bankers Life Insurance Company. In addition, the Student Assistance Center would include the Learning Center and some of the Admissions and Advising staff.

Professor pursues lost texts

Paul Schach, professor of modern languages at UNL, is appealing for help in locating three books of medieval Danish manuscripts and accompanying notes and translations.

Schach said the material disappeared sometime in the last six months from the UNL City Campus, possibly from Love Library. Police searches have failed to locate the missing books, which represent more than 10 years of Schach's research.

Anyone with any possible leads on the missing books is asked to contact Schach, at 472-3849, or the UNL department of modern languages, at 472-3745.
