Sammartino Siamese twins UNL wrestling 'connection'

By Steven Sacktout

Siamese twins Spike and Oly Sammartino signed a letter of intent Sunday to wrestle with the Shucker wrestling team next year.

"They're quite a pair," Shucker Coach Boob Beers said. "They never lost a match in high school and I expect them to step in at the 190-pound slot and stick the living hell out of everybody in the conference."

The twins, who are joined together at the hip and armpit, were recruited by several wrestling powerhouses, including Kansas, Kansas State, Slippery Rock, Nevada Las Vegas, Colorado and Nebraska.

They took recruiting trips to each school and "par-tayed like crazy at every one," Oly said.

After the trips, the twins were split on their decision about which school to attend.

"Oly wanted to go to Vegas 'cause he liked all them dancun' girls when we wuz out dere," Spike said. "But da Spiker here wanted to come to U-N-of-L 'cause I like cows."

After weeks of heated discussion, which often resulted in the brothers plummeling each other relentlessly, the Sammartinos finally agreed to attend Nebraska.

"The boys are so close," Hilda, the boy's mother said. "They have always done everything together. I just couldn't bear to see them split up."

Once they finish their collegiate careers and receive their degrees in beekeeping, the Sammartinos plan to pursue a career in professional wrestling.

"We'd make one heck of a tag team," Oly said. "We could double-team our opponents through the whole match."

'More must stay,' says coaching columnist

So Nebraska lost its second-round NIT game. In the words of the cartoon character Garfield, "Big, fat, hairy deal."

After my last column, I woke up and smelled both the coffee and the roses.

I have come to the conclusion that More Must Stay.

Granted, Nebraska was 16-14 this year under Iball's legendary coaching style, which was handed down from his immortal father, Sank. But, despite the record, the team did have fun and played fair games and that's what counts. After all, it's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game. Hi ho!

Nebraska basketball fans should scold Iball for allowing Rave Hopping to come here. After all, everyone knows

Bob-dad announces new domed f-ball stadium

By Christine Catheter
Staff Urlnater

Athletic director "The Bobfather" announced Monday that a new domed stadium will be constructed in what is now considered the middle of main city campus.

The stadium is being built for no other reason but to make "Nebraska football the most outrageous in the country," the Bobfather said.

"We don't really need a totally new stadium, so we're looking at this as a basic in-your-face move to all those students and teachers who thought we were being unfair about our training table and computer facilities," the Bobfather said.

"We think it's only right that we show you just how unfair we can be if we wanna. So thur."

The stadium will be built over the space now occupied by an area stretching from the Selleck quadrangle to Avery Hall. What the building won't take up will be parking space, the Bobfather said.

The stadium will cost over $205 million and include a huge training table, an indoor restaurant for alumni and supporters only, offices for the entire men's athletic department, a private pool, sauna and basketball court and a private theater so "we may watch films of our glorious triumphs in luxury," the Bobfather said.

The Bobfather laughed heartily when asked where classroom space would be relocated.

"How should I know?" he said as he pounded his fists on his desk with delight.

Coach More Iball adding 'Roman element' to Shucker B-ball

By Pobopo Assmissing
Staff Coach

Some Shucker basketball fans carry on as if winning and losing meant life and death. If Nebraska coach More Iball has his way, next season that will be reality.

The revamped "Husker Shootout" will insure some Shucker fans do lay it on the line at Shucker games. From now on, any fan caught yelling insults at the Shucker players or Iball will be apprehended by security and given a lottery number. If the Shuckers lose, thereby justifying the fans' screams, then Iball will spring for a free dinner at the Cornshucker Hotel for the number holder.

But, if the Shuckers win, the winning (or losing) lottery ticket number holder will be led to center court, where a group of trained commandos will promptly shoot him or her to death.

"I've already talked this over with the rifle team and the Lincoln S.W.A.T. organization. I think they're excited about it," Iball said. "We've still got some kinks to work out, but I think we'll be O.K. by the time Bemidji State rolls in next November."

Iball said the shooting was a "little drastic," but how else could basketball fans really put their all into a game?

"Besides, they'll have a chance. We're not gonna tie 'em up or anything. We want to keep the 'Roman element' involved."

Iball said one of the kinks was how to make sure the rifle teams didn't shoot down innocent bystanders instead of offending fans.

"This will end a lot of crap we've had to 'ake lately," Iball said. "This way, we find out who the real Shucker fans are, and, at the same time, offer the most exciting ticket in the country. Where else can you see a good ball game and a live execution in the same place?"

that Nebraska does not have room for two major sports. Our houses are jammed with Big Red cups and footballs, and we have no room for any more Nebraska bumperstickers on our cars.

What would we do with a winning basketball team? There's no reason to pour millions of dollars into the basketball program when we can use the money for football. Sooner or later we're going to buy — er — win a national football championship.

Good grief, let's get back on track with Iball. I was wrong when I said we should play tough teams during the non-conference schedule. Every team plays patsies, so why should we exert ourselves. More works hard enough out there just yelling at his players and squatting near the bench. Why should he have to worry about beating good teams? That's in the woods.

A high school coach I once knew told me, "You get paid whether you win or lose."

More will get paid anyway, but I want fans to band together and give him a break for the sake of Go Big Red football, apple pie and the U.S.A.

Hi ho! More must stay!
