Murph" stepped up to the plate at 11:59 p.m. on August 5. The score was knotted at zero. Each team had one hit. The Murph hit the ball deep, but let the announcer take over.

"...it's high and deep. It may be out of here. It's...it's...it's stopped in mid-air! It's just hanging there."

"He hit it on the stoke of midnight, dad," Chipper said, "It's August 6 now. Strike time. Now can we go home? It's been a great time. Really dad, it has."

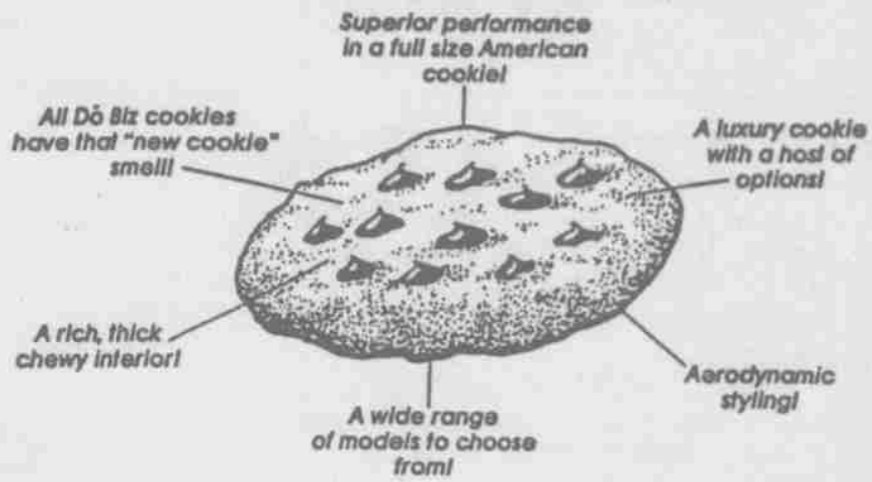

"Shut up, Chipper."

The Average American family left the great American pastime hanging in limbo. At the gate a vendor was selling Marge Schott dolls that had "Please come back," written across their little red shirts.

"Come back?" Ed said, "I should have never come in the first place."

Point Four was left under the bleacher seats, forgotten. They noticed he was missing three days later and picked him up at the lost and found.
