UNL extends drop/add hours

By Jen Deselms
Staff Reporter

Drop/add hours have been extended this semester to eliminate long lines, said the UNL assistant director of registration and records.

Tony Schkade said drop/add, which begins Aug. 27, now will be open during the lunch hour from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., except on Sept. 3.

Students can pick up time appointment cards at window 5 in the Administration Building. Cards will be issued for that day only.

"We hope to discontinue time cards as quickly as possible and take people on a first come first serve basis," Schkade said. "Our attempt at doing this is through being open over the noon hour so we don't cause the line to back up."

Students should report to the Nebraska Union at the time indicated on their time card and pay a $5 drop/add fee. A course request form then is filled out and returned.

If students carefully go over the markings on the course request form, their success rate increases tremendously, Schkade said. Students then go to a waiting area to be given a revised schedule. If a class is closed or other class conflicts occur, students must fill out a new request form.

After a revised schedule is issued, students go to the checkout area.

An express line for drops or grading option changes, a course listing terminal and advisers will be available.

After Sept. 4 students wishing to drop or add must go to student accounts, the bursar's office and the records and registration office. Adding a class also requires signatures from the instructor and the dean's office of the college the student is enrolled in.

Full tuition refunds are available until Sept. 4.

Sept. 5 and 6	75%
Sept. 9 through 13	50%
Sept. 16 through 20	25%

No refunds will be given after Sept. 20.

Roskens seeks state aid

ROSKENS from Page 8

Roskens was critical of the regents' decision. The Lincoln Sunday Journal-Star reported that he warned the regents their action would not solve the financial problems of the medical center. He said NU still faces the fundamental issue of how broad its offerings should be.

Roskens predicted that Nebraskans will have to respond to the university's budget problems by agreeing to provide more money to maintain a comprehensive university. Or they will have to agree that the university must narrow its focus.

"My overriding objective," Roskens said, "is to try and shape a new consensus among the people of the state...the legislators, the governor and the people" about the direction of NU."

Roskens said he is not sure when Nebraska's economic situation will improve.

"I look to the future as an optimist," he said, "as a committed optimist."

Although there have been peaks and valleys of support for the university, the history of the state and its people overall have been one of "considerable support" for the university, he said.

It is easy to be derailed by day-to-day fiscal problems, Roskens said. But he said he tries to focus on long-term quality.

"My uppermost objective in the longer-range sense is to do everything possible to enable the university to grow in stature," Roskens said. He said he wants to focus on NU's role in the economic growth of the state.

In the past, Roskens has said that NU has "every right to aspire to becoming the university of first rank in the Middle West." He said he still thinks that is true, despite the current financial problems.

Although some people think the budget could be cut for NU's central administration, Roskens said, it would not be a major money source. The budget for central administration, including Roskens own $87,000 salary, is $1.4 to $1.5 million.

Since Roskens became president eight years ago, the number of staff positions in central administration has decreased. He said that even if the central administration were eliminated, the regents still would need support staff.

NU leaders...

W. Rudy Lewis

W. Rudy Lewis is no stranger to student affairs.

That might surprise some people because Lewis, the new UNL Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, is known for his 3½ year stint as director of university relations.

Lewis said he worked in student affairs at several Oklahoma colleges.

Lewis said he will meet with college deans, the Faculty Senate Executive Committee, other vice chancellors and student groups in the following weeks.

Some student affairs projects overlap with projects in other areas, Lewis said.

One example is joint effort by student affairs, academic affairs, admissions and advising to retain students. The project includes combining New Student Orientation with registration for freshmen and creating a student resource center in the Teachers College building, he said.

Janet Krause

Interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Janet Krause returned to her former position as Assistant Dean of the NU College of Law.

During her interim from Jan. 1, 1985, to Aug. 1, 1985, Krause worked on three programs for this fall.

One program combines registration with New Student Orientation on campus. The second is a new student assistance center in Teachers College. The third program is a student information system.

She said she enjoyed her interim position as vice chancellor, but she misses teaching and working with law students.

"Vice chancellor is the highest level of administration I've ever experienced," Krause said. "I've learned a lot about decision-making. And being part of the chancellor's cabinet has been an interesting challenge."
