Driveway dickering saves money, sparks social life

Andrea Hoy/Daily Nebraskan

Mrs. Perry Russ, left, and Donna Hunt put away the items that weren't sold at their garage sale, 4730 Bryson St.

Analysis by Mike Grant
Staff Reporter

Looking for a way to furnish an apartment, complete a wardrobe, and expand a book or record collection, without breaking your budget? Then look into the pastime that's sweeping UNL — garage sales.

Visiting garage and estate sales is a way to find bargains, get exercise and meet people. Lincoln is a good garage sale town. Because the population seems to be shifting within a two-mile radius of the capital, a steady supply of people always want to sell goods.

For Carla Hiatt of 1337 Washington St., her moving sale was a way to get rid of "junk" she had accumulated.

"A lot of the out of the ordinary items, like boxing gloves and a card shuffling machine have sold quickly," she said.
