Offensive line faces reconstruction

By Jeff Apel
Staff Reporter

Nebraska offensive line coach Cletus Fischer is having to undergo a major reconstruction project in replacing all five starting offensive linemen from last year's 10-2 team.

But the transition has gone smoothly as Fischer has found five "solid" starting candidates for this year's line. They'll replace all-Big Eight linemen Mark Traynowicz and Mark Behning.

"We'll have a respectable line this season, even with all the new people we will have playing," Fischer, who enters his 27th season as the Cornhusker's offensive line coach said. "We've got a lot of individual talent that will just have to mold together."

Heading the field of starting candidates is 6-6, 275 pound Bill Lewis and junior Stan Parker.

Lewis, a center, and Parker, a right guard, are both described by Fischer as the most likely candidates to succeed Traynowicz and Behning as the next great offensive linemen for the Huskers.

"Lewis has got a big position to fill but he has tremendous size and strength to go along with his aggressive, quick style of play," Fischer said. "Parker might not have the physical stats that Lewis does, but he still has great ability with his quickness."

In addition, junior Todd Carpenter could see considerable playing time at right tackle.

"We've got a good group of offensive linemen that played well in the spring against our defense," Fischer said. "The interior of our line could be pretty good and the tackles played better than I thought they would in the spring, so I feel pretty confident."

Fischer will spend the next five weeks going over some of the "basics" in preparation for Nebraska home and season opener against Florida State Sept. 7.

If all goes according to plan, the line will be more than ready for the nationally televised game against the Seminoles.

"We're hoping Florida State doesn't come out and do anything different than they have in the past, at least we don't expect them to," Fischer said. "If they do, we'll just have to make a few adjustments which hopefully won't be too much of a problem."

Kicking coach hoping to find consistency

By Jeff Korbek
Staff Reporter

Nebraska kickers' coach Cletus Fischer said he hopes he can go with one field goal kicker the entire 1985 season. The past two seasons the Huskers have had to change kickers midway through each season.

In 1983, Dave Schneider opened the season as the Huskers' No. 1 kicker only to be replaced by Scott Livingston as the season progressed. In 1984, Livingston opened the season as both punter and kicker, but gave up his kicking duties to concentrate on punting. Sophomore Dale Klein finished the season as Nebraska's kicker.

"We hope to find somebody that can stay in that No. 1 position and not have to alternate a great deal," Fischer said. "When we are winning by a lot, then sure we will alternate, but we do not like to alternate kickers."

At the end of spring practices, Klein retained his No. 1 position. Senior Dan Wingard finished behind Klein.

Klein, 6-1, 190, converted 26 of 28 extra point attempts, but only managed four of eight field goal tries last season. His longest was 38 yards, missing three beyond 40 yards. Wingard, 6-1, 200 senior, did not place kick last year.

Fischer said the No. 1 kicker will handle kickoffs, extra point and field goals.

And although the kickers have experience returning, the punting is a whole different situation. Livingston graduated after handling all the punting chores last season. He punted 49 times for a 41.2 average and Fischer considered Livingston's punting one of the strong points of the last year's team.

At the end of spring drills Wingard had earned the punting job. As fall practices begin, he will be challenged by sophomore Craig Schnitzler and sophomore John Kroeker.

Last season, Wingard only punted once. Schnitzler, 5-8, 215, comes off a redshirt season. He is currently listed as the No. 2 punter.

Kroeker, 6-0, 180, broke the freshman punting record while kicking for the frosh last season. Kroeker completed the season with 40.9 average eclipsing the mark of 40.1 set by Bill Bomberger in 1966.

"We had a reasonably good spring in kicking and punting," Fischer said. "We need to work on consistency on field goals and extra points."
