Students face better chances for jobs now, researcher says

Job opportunities look bright for today's college students, a business researcher says.

Donald E. Pursell, UNL director of the Bureau of Business Research, said today's students will face less competition when looking for entry-level jobs.

Students who entered the job market five years ago competed with other members of the post-World War II baby boom. All the babies grew up, and created an influx of students who wanted jobs, Pursell said.

However, today's students won't have nearly as much competition because the baby boom was before their time, he said. Because of the decline in numbers, students can expect a higher success rate when looking for jobs, Pursell said.

However, in five years, college students may encounter decreased promotional opportunities, he said.

"Baby boomers won't be that much farther ahead in business and they'll be looking for the same advancement opportunities," he said.

However, employment prospects for students today look good, and the trend should continue, Pursell said.

As A Navy Pilot, The Sky's Your Only Limit.

Nothing else comes close to the excitement of Navy flying. And no other job gives the same early leadership opportunities and management responsibility.

As an officer and pilot in the U.S. Navy, you get immediate decision-making authority as well as the practical experience and technical training you need to make your career take off.

It starts with Navy flight training which includes state-of-the-art navigation, aerodynamics, and computer know-how. It goes on to be one of the most rewarding careers you can choose.

Those rewards include good pay, over $34,000 after only four years, and generous benefits: 30 days paid vacation earned each year, medical and dental care, low-cost life insurance coverage, and many other tax-free allowances.

To qualify, you must have a BS or BA, be no older than 28, pass physical and aptitude exams, qualify for security clearance and be a U.S. citizen.

Interviews will be held in the Student Union from 8:30 AM-4:30 PM September 30 and October 1. Sign up for an interview in the Career Placement Office.
