

Conference members admire improved UNL health center

University Health Center officials got a chance to show off their renovated building last week when they sponsored the Big Eight Health Center Conference Thursday and Friday.

The conference was held in conjunction with the completion of the new health center. Dr. Gerald Fleischli, the center's medical director, said each school represented at the conference shared information about alcohol and drug use, survey systems, computer systems, after-hours operations, fees and legislative issues.

"Each of us take turns hosting the meeting," Fleischli said. "We thought this would be a good year for us to host."

Most administrators who attended the conference praised the new center.

"I'm envious because of the programs put together, the space you have, comprehensive student health service," said Dr. Rolan Zick of the Wardenburg Student Health Service at the University of Colorado.

"It's like moving from a barn into a house," said James Stobl, associate director at Watkins Memorial Hospital Student Health Service at the University of Kansas.

"Mine was opened in 1889. I'm quite envious," said Dr. Robert Tout, medical director of the Lafene Health Center, at Kansas State University.

"Each student health center tries to pattern to meet the needs of the students," said Gray Walters from Watkins Memorial. "UNL's is superb."
