Unique UNL programs focus on needs of gifted students

By Deb Hooker Staff Reporter

Gifted high school students don't always get the special attention they need, said James O'Hanlon, Teachers College dean.

"It is probably true that anyone who varies from the norm too much is not well-served in the school system," O'Hanlon said.

Although schools have improved in meeting the needs of physically and mentally handicapped children, he said, many schools are just beginning to deal with the problems of teaching gifted

UNL currently is the only university in the country to offer programs for gifted students and their teachers and counselors, he said.

The guidance lab helps 10 to 12 high school juniors every Friday, said Toni Santmire, lab and endorsement program coordinator. The students take tests to determine their personal interests and style. Style relates to how the students relate to others, she said. The tests help counselors deal with the students.

Later, the counselors meet with each student and go over the test results, Santmire said. They compare their scores with others that are in the fields the student is interested in.

Attracts gifted students

Santmire said the program shows students the wide range of possible careers. It also attracts gifted students to the university.

The counselors, who are graduate students, also benefit from the experience, she said.

admission is $2.

The program, which helps about 300 students each summer, was co-sponsored by the Nebraska Center for Excellence in Education and UNL, O'Hanlon said. Only students from the 12 NCEE school districts could participate in the program, he said. This year the university alone will sponsor the program, and any Nebraska high school student can participate, he said.

Limited admittance

The Gifted Endorsement Program offers courses to high school teachers, Santmire said. The courses are offered only in the summer and admittance is limited, she said. Teachers usually take two summers to complete the 18credit program.

After teachers complete the program, the university recommends them for endorsement to teach classes for gifted students. Santmire said UNL's requirements are usually higher than those of the state, so state endorsement is almost assured.

If the Legislature cuts the university's budget by $5 million, the gifted student programs probably will be cut she said.

Vietnam vet to speak about war, new threats

By Martha Miller Staff Reporter

The founder and executive director of the Vietnam Veterans of America will speak at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Nebraska Union.

Robert Muller will talk about his Vietnam experience and the possibility of the United States becoming involved in another war like Vietnam.

Muller, whose speech is sponsored by the University Program Council's "Talks and Topics" Committee, will discuss Lebanon and peace-time military build-up.

Muller was chosen by time magazine in 1979 as one of 50 future national leaders, he has spoken at more than 200 colleges in the last two years.

In 1969, Muller, a 23-year-old Marine Corps lieutenant, was leading an assault against a Viet Cong stronghold when a bullet severed his spine. He now is confined to a wheelchair.

Muller founded Vietnam Veterans of America in 1977. The group is the only national organization of Vietnam veterans. The 20,000-member organization lobbies in Washington, D.C., for better treatment of veterans in hospitals and for more research on agent orange. Agent orange, a chemical sprayed on fields in Vietnam, may be the cause of the health problems many veterans

In response to the article, Rapkin agreed that the position and course are valuable to the department's educational mission. But he said people also should be aware of the difficult decisions Furgason must make about faculty positions.

Furgason said the status of the position won't be known until financial uncertainties are settled.

a unique opportunity Agriculturalists —

For you and the world itself. You can put your AGRICULTURE DEGREE or FARMING EX-PERIENCE to work at a challenging, demanding and unique opportunity. You'll be meeting new people, learning a new language, experiencing a new culture and gaining a whole new outlook on your future career or retirement. And while you are building your future you'll help people in developing countries by sharing your skills in crop or livestock production, bookkeeping, soil management, equipment care, agribusiness or other capabilities necessary for food production. The financial rewards may not be great, but as a Peace Corps volunteer, your opportunity for growth is certain.
