Neil Simon comedy to play at experimental theater

By John Rood
Staff Reporter

The Nebraska Director's Theatre, known for its presentation of lesser-known experimental plays, will venture toward the mainstream with its production of "I Ought To Be In Pictures."

The Neil Simon comedy is most widely known in its movie form, a 1982 film starring Walter Matthau, Dinah Manoff and Ann Margaret.

"I Ought To Be In Pictures" opens as 19-year-old Libby Tucker arrives in a Hollywood suburb with glamorous dreams. She has just hitchhiked from Brooklyn to meet her father, well-known screenwriter Herb Tucker, and launch her career in show business.

Unfortunately Herb's career has run aground in self-doubt and frustration. What results is a comedic reunion, and a touchingly funny realization of their common sense of failure, hope for success and need for love.

"I Ought To Be In Pictures" stars Ron Hager as Herb. Hager is a member of Lincoln's Washington Street Players' Place. Gigi Guerin, recently seen in "Greater Tuna," plays Herb's street-smart daughter, Libby. Cecilia Gibb, a graduate of the UNL Theatre Arts Department, plays Herb's ambitious girlfriend, Steffy.

Director Beth Amsbary, a UNL graduate student, said she hopes to incorporate her personal directing style in to the already-famous script. It is her third production at the Theatre.

"I haven't seen the film yet, but hope to after the show is done," she said. "Neil Simon is indeed a master craftsman," Amsbary said.
