season, they had little experience in the backfield. However, the backfield jelled as the season progressed.

Besides Washington and Carr, Nebraska also has several other players who made significant contributions this year. They include Bryan Sielber (30 tackles), Cleo Miller (23 tackles), Brian Davis (23 tackles, two interceptions) and Mike Carl (21 tackles, two interceptions).

With experience and depth, Nebraska gets the nod.

Defensive backs: Slight advantage to Nebraska.

Defensive line

The Nebraska-Michigan game may be remembered as the "Battle of the Defensive Lines."

The Wolverines were rated second in the final NCAA statistics for total defense. They were the stingiest defense in the nation when it came to allowing points. Michigan allowed only 75 points (five touchdowns) in 11 games — the lowest since 1972. The Wolverines held their opponents to just under 3 yards a carry.

Michigan's line is led by All-Americans Mike Hammerstein and Mark Messner. Hammerstein, a 6-4, 261-pound senior tackle, recorded 71 tackles this season, including 22 for losses. Messner, a sophomore, had 11 quarterback sacks.

The Cornhusker defense is led by second team All-American tackle Jim Skow. Skow set Nebraska career records for number of tackles for losses and yardage of tackles for losses.

The defensive end spot has been a concern for the Huskers all season because of injuries. Gregg Reeves and Tony Holloway will probably start the Michigan game. Freshman Broderick Thomas will back them up. Thomas recorded 13 tackles as a back-up this year, including two quarterback sacks.

Middle guard will be filled by Danny Noonan. Noonan, a junior from Lincoln, had 47 tackles this season. Fourteen were for losses. Defensive line: Slight edge Michigan.
