New program enables students to register sooner

By Linda Hartmann
Staff Reporter

New students who come to UNL for summer orientation will be greeted by more student hosts and will leave with complete fall class schedules.

New Student Enrollment '86 is an expanded orientation program in which new students will complete registration at day-long sessions. In the past freshmen have registered for fall classes through the mail before summer orientation.

Gail Cox, New Student Orientation coordinator, said registration will be combined with orientation to make the process smoother and easier for students. College advisors will talk to each student about scheduling.

Cox said she is hoping more students will attend each of the 24 orientation days because of direct registration. Of about 3,500 new students every fall, she is expecting 80 to 85 percent to attend. Usually 48 to 50 percent attend. Cox said she expects 135 students and 135 parents every day.

Cox said non-traditional, transfer and Lincoln resident students will be able to attend special orientation sessions that address their special needs and concerns about attending UNL.

More hosts were hired to help with the greater numbers. Twenty-two instead of 15 hosts were hired.

NSO will send invitations and a booklet called "Your Freshman Year" to new students. Students who don't attend orientation will be contacted on how to register. Students and their parents will be able to choose the day they want to attend orientation.

Hosts from the College of Arts and Sciences are Jeff Dillow, Fremont; Leslie Greathouse, Lincoln; Scott Lewandowski, Grand Island; Mark Maley, Ogallala; Barb Meister, West Point; Angela Swantek, Genoa, and Marcie Langenberg, Omaha.

Teachers college hosts are Jo Hoffman, Earlring, Iowa; Shelly Moravec, Geneva and Kara Phelan, Gretna. College of Home Economics hosts are Sara Abler, Norfolk and Karen Sandahl, Wakefield.

Hosts from the engineering college are Donald Buettner, Grand Island and Mike Rochford, Kearney. Journalism hosts are Amy Gerken, North Platte, and Tina Sullivan, Crete.

Hosts from the College of Agriculture are Sheryl Herling, Clarkson, and Andy Jacobitz, Prosser.

Tonya Horn, Omaha is an undeclared student host. Business college hosts are Steve Johnson, Omaha; Bill Koenig, Clearwater, and Sandy Morris, Omaha.

CFA reverses decision to withhold NSSA funds

By James Rupprecht
Staff Reporter

An earlier decision by the Committee for Fees Allocation to withhold funds for the Nebraska State Student Association during the 1986-87 academic year, was reversed last week following an appeal.

Executive director Deb Chapelle and other NSSA executive members Thursday appealed the Feb. 11 vote, which denied the organization 50 cents in student fees.

CFA members previously opposed funding NCCA's lobbying efforts because they thought the association's members lacked enthusiasm and communicated poorly with the students they represented. CFA members said they were opposed to NSSA's representation of college students as a group, rather than as UNL students specifically.

NSSA, however, answered CFA's allegations with a 10-page report that said information from NSSA was readily available and that NSSA members are enthusiastic.

Chapelle told the CFA board that they were overlooking NSSA's real purpose.

"We're not here to specifically represent UNL," she said, "there are other groups such as ASUN and GLC that are here for that."

During the appeal, Chapelle also accused CFA's NSAA subcommittee of poor research. She said the subcommittee misinformed CFA because it failed to consult with NSSA.

Currently, program and facility fees for the 1986-87 academic year have been set at $103.60 per student, up 3.2 percent from 1985-86.
