Because of a rash of fraudulent resumes, employers are more likely than ever to check your credentials, according to Paul Barada of Barada Associates Inc., an Indiana firm that investigates job applicants for more than 250 companies.

"It's better for a job candidate to admit that he's been fired or that he didn't complete his degree than to lie," Barada says. "If you're caught lying at the beginning of your career, it can ruin you forever."

In quest of closer relations

closer ties with the Soviet Union; but basically Americans of any age and any background. He said political and religious backgrounds will be left behind because Peace Quest wants to develop lines of communication, not converts.

The press conference was Peace Quest's first contact with the public. Kasperek said that the organization relies on the media for promotion because it has no money to pay for TV coverage, newspaper ads or flyers. Peace Quest has received interest from local public figures Helen Boosalis, Sen. Bill Nichol, Don McGinley and Gov. Bob Kerrey. Kerrey has endorsed the movement by declaring Nov. 17 Peace Quest Day. Kasperek said to be completely successful, they need to move to the national arena.

So far, Peace Quest has sent letters of information to General Secretary Gorbachev, Tass News Agency, Pravda and the Soviet Embassy in the United States, which responded with a letter saying it was a good idea.

Peace Quest's goal with the Soviet government is to get permission to travel in the country, which Kasperek said shouldn't be a problem. He said traveling to the Soviet Union will be the basic means of informing Soviet citizens.

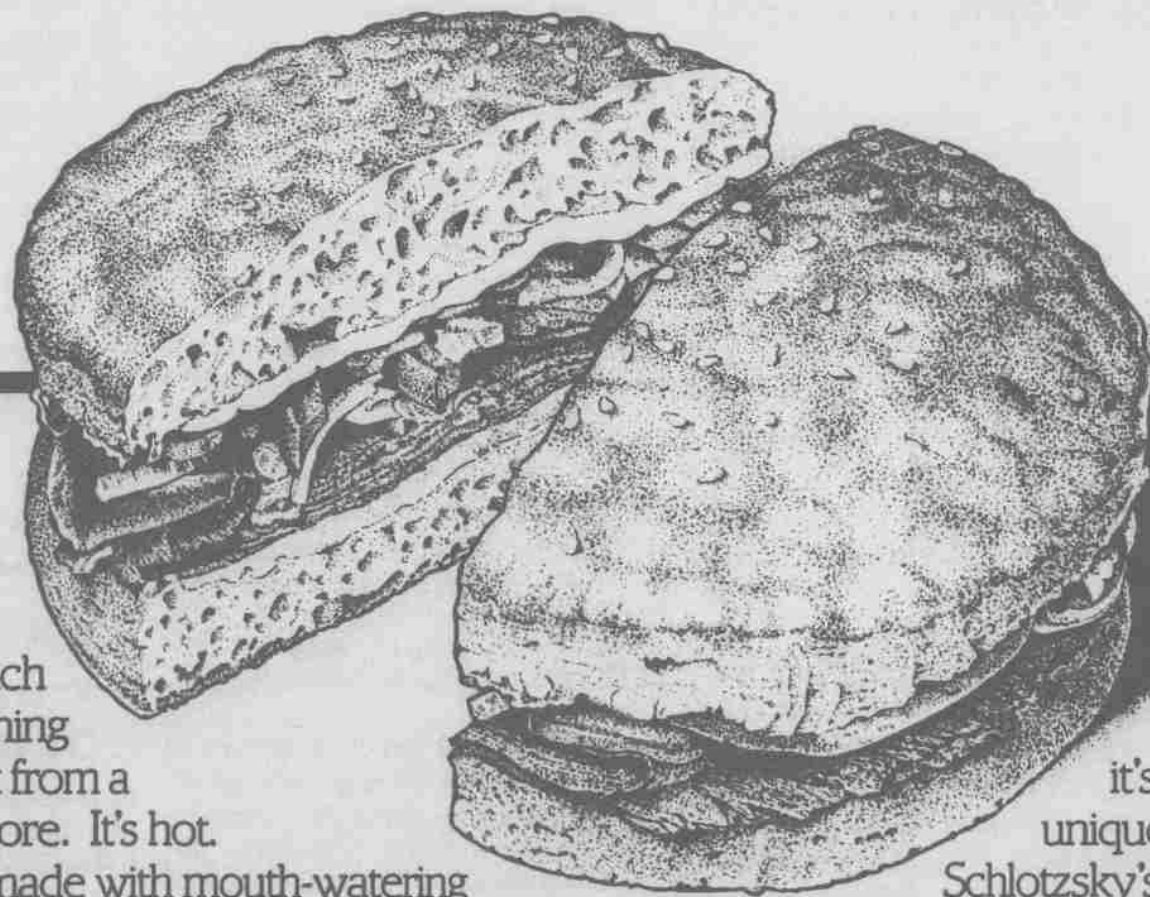

By creating a broader understanding between the countries, Kasperek said the people will influence the leaders because they are part of the citizenry, too. He said he isn't looking for a specific policy change and doesn't claim specific authority on a political level.

To become involved, letters can be sent to Doug "Gonzo" Kasperek, 5025 Prince Rd., Lincoln, NE 68516, (402) 423-1379.

The new Schlotzsky's Philly sandwich — it's everything you'd expect from a Philly, and more. It's hot.

And it's made with mouth-watering ingredients like succulent lean beef smothered in tangy steak sauce. And two kinds of cheese: mozzarella and cheddar. Plus, we topped all that off with garden fresh green peppers, onions and mushrooms.

But there's one big difference:

it's served on the uniquely delicious Schlotzsky's baked fresh daily
