Homemade cheese available

The Department of Food Science and Technology has a limited amount of cheese and sausage for sale to the public at the East Campus Dairy Store. The cheese is made in the department's food pilot plant and the sausages are made by the department of animal science Loeffel Meat Lab.

Cheese is available in bulk quantities or in attractive gift boxes. Salami and summer sausage is offered in several of the gift boxes. Cheese varieties include natural cheddar (longhorn) — available in mild, mellow, sharp or smoked flavors; Husker cheese, a milk-white cheese similar in flavor to Monterey Jack, also available with jalapeno, pimento and caraway seeds; and New York cheddar, a well-aged white cheese with a sharp, slightly pungent flavor.

Cheese and sausages can be purchased for pickup or mailout. The cheese hotline number, (402) 472-2828, can be used to order.

A supply of the gift box selections will be available at the East Campus Dairy Store near the 38th and Holdrege entrance to East Campus. Store hours are 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday and 1 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Please allow 24 hours for pickup orders. Orders for the 1986 Christmas season will not be taken after December 22. However, some selections will be available at the store for pick-up until noon, December 24.

The Lord ignored him. "Boys," he said, "what's the matter? You can tell Me."

"Nothin's the matter, Lord," Sam said, puzzled.

"This is Christmas, boys. This is the season of giving and miracles. For the last three years I've selected you two for a miraculous Christmas blessing and you just won't let Me give you any-thing. Why is that?"

"Reckon we just don't need none of that fancy stuff you keep sendin' us, Lord," Sam said.

"We don't take much to charity," Luke added, less tactfully.

This appeared to anger the Lord — His eye's flashed lightning, blackening the wallpaper slightly, and thunder rolled in the distance. "Listen, charity doesn't enter into it. I giveth and I taketh away. Period. Now I've determined in my omnipotent wisdom to bless you two ungrateful old coots, and you're going to be blessed whether you like it or not!" His expression softened. "You gotta understand, boys, once I determine to do something it has to be done. So why don't you fellows just tell me what you want for Christmas?"

"Don't want nothin'," Luke persisted stubbornly.

But Sam was thinking it over. There seemed to be just one way to get their privacy back. "Reckon we could use an extra five dollars 'til the check comes, it You got it on You."

The Lord looked concerned. "Now boys, it could cause quite a bit of trouble down here if it got around that I was handing out cash . . ."

"Can I show You the door, Lord?"

"Okay, okay, the Lord said, taking out his billfold. "Look, the smallest I got is a ten. I suppose you want me to create a bank teller to make change"

Sam decided not to press the point. "That won't be necessary, Lord," he said, taking the proffered bill. "Thank-kee very kindly."

The Lord heaved a sigh and stood up. The throne vanished. "Don't get up, guys," He said. He propped his golden sandle on the card table and pulled his robe up a few inches. A tin flask was strapped to his tree trunk-thick calf. He unstrapped the flask and held it out. "At least let me offer you boys some holiday cheer."

"What's this?" Sam asked, suspiciously.

"Wild Turkey."

"You sure it ain't myrrh, or frankenstein or like that?" Luke asked.

"It's a pint of straight Wild Turkey. Okay?" Once again the thunder rolled and the wallpaper smouldered briefly.

"No offense," Sam put in hastily and took the flask. "Much obliged."

God turned to go. At the door He turned around and said softly, "Merry Christmas, boys."

"Hrrummp," they answered in unison.
