

Book tackles Peruvian trek

Participants' contributions will be published in a large-format book called "Earthtreks: Project Peru, The Mystery." The book will be distributed through Walden Bookstores. Profits from the book will be divided among the photographers, writers and staff.

Barker said that the expedition is an excellent opportunity for young writers and photographers to be published in a high-quality publication. He said that it was conceivable that participants could earn as much through profits from the books as they spent on the expedition.

The publishing effort will involve 32 travel writers, six underwater photographers and 62 outdoor photographers, allowing them to participate in a workshop environment to shoot and publish a book about exploration and adventure in other parts of the world.

Barker stressed that the expedition was not a glorified vacation. "The areas are sometimes rugged, exhausting and can be dangerous. But the concept of capturing on film and paper the reflections of 100 enthusiastic photographers and writers is most impressive," he said.

This is the third such project sponsored by the National Institute for Exploration. Past projects have been to Kenya and Egypt, and future projects will be in Israel and Hong Kong.

Selection is based on a pre-application form covering information on personal background and a written or photographic sample. Each group will fulfill a specific eight-day assignment during March 1987. Assignment groups will depart each Saturday from Miami throughout the project.

No one from Nebraska has participated in past programs, but they are encouraged to apply. If interested, contact Dr. Barry W. Barker, director, National Institute for Exploration, P.O. Box 3493, Champaign, IL 61821, (217) 352-3667.

Financial-aid deadlines announced

The UNL Scholarship and Financial Aids office has come out with the spring semester deadlines for financial aid. The deadlines are:

Feb. 2

Financial Aid Forms should be sent to the College Scholarship Service (CSS) by this date to apply for need-based scholarships. Submitting the FAF by this date will also be an application for other scholarships and need-based UNL funds.

Feb. 17

Freshman scholarship applicants must submit their "Application for Admission" form, high-school transcript and application fee to the UNL Office of Undergraduate Admissions and Advising.

March 2

The FAF should be sent to CSS to apply for all need-based financial aid (except need-based scholarships, see Feb. 2), that UNL awards.

March 2

Upper-class students who are applying for scholarships only (where need is not a factor) must complete a scholarships application form and turn it in to the Office of Scholarships and Financial Aid. This form is available at the office, Administration Building 122.

March 13

Projected announcement date of Regents and David Scholarship winners.

April 1

The FAF form must be received in our office from CSS for a student to be considered a priority applicant. Priority applicants will be considered for the federal and institutional funds which our office awards. Not being a priority applicant doesn't keep a student from applying for and receiving a Pell Grant or a Guaranteed Student Loan.

April 1

Students applying for need-based aid must be admitted to UNL in a degree-seeking or certificate program.
