Job search center Center more than interviews

By Lee Rood
Staff Reporter

If there's one thing students should realize about the Career Planning and Placement Center, it is that it provides more than just on-campus interviewing.

Janel Queen, assistant director of the center, said too many students don't know all the services the center can provide.

Queen said that most students are aware of the on-campus interviews the center sets up from September to April every year, but there's much more than that.

Every year the center receives more than 40,000 job listings for various fields, and about the same number of employment opportunities for teachers.

Queen said students should regularly check job listings in the job bulletin in front of the office and the Career Corner on Mondays in the Daily Nebraskan.

Because local employers often call the center for resumes, the center can refer registered students to them as well.

Last semester the center provided a free university course on job hunting, and Queen said there should be more in the future.

The center also provides workshops and seminars on job hunting and interviewing.

The center itself is supplied with career and corporate libraries to help students find out which jobs are available in big companies and how to get them.

All alumni, undergraduate and graduate students at UNL are eligible to use the Career Planning and Placement Center. Students are encouraged to register two semesters before they expect to seek employment. Early registration is important as many employers recruit candidates throughout the year.

A registration packet includes a Personal Data Sheet, an Academic Record Form and a copy of the Placement Manual. Students and alumni must have completed a registration packet before interviewing on campus or compiling credentials.

Center officials recommend that each student attend a scheduled orientation session in order to obtain a registration packet and become familiar with the range of center services.

Any senior, graduate student or alumni may establish a credential file. Credentials are made available to employers on request and are mailed at a nominal fee.

Students interested in registering with the Career Planning and Placement Center should go to room 230 in the Nebraska Union to set up an appointment.

Interim director appointed

Coby Bunch Simerly, a former assistant dean of agriculture and acting director of human resources and family studies at the University of Illinois at Urbana, has been named interim director of the Office of Career Planning and Placement at UNL.

Simerly, named to the post in late January, succeeds Gerry Phaneuf, who resigned from the position to establish a first-of-its-kind career planning service in Omaha.

James Griesen, interim vice chancellor for student affairs, said Simerly has proven herself to be a person of remarkable versatility and ability, whose career has been marked by a continuing concern for the aspirations of college personnel and students. She has been active in a variety of programs, which in many cases extend far beyond the immediate responsibilities of the positions she has held and reflect her commitment both to her profession and her community," he said.

Simerly, whose husband is dean of the Division of Continuing Studies at UNL, has been working for the past several months on a half-time basis in the Office of Student Affairs and half-time in the Office of Research and Graduate Studies.

Simerly was acting director of the School of Human Resources and Family Studies, which is the University of Illinois at Urbana's title for resident instruction in the College of Agriculture from 1981-85 while also serving as assistant director of the School of Human Resources and Family Studies.

Simerly was associate professor in the School of Home Economics at Eastern Illinois University from 1978-81, and served as administrative director for adult consumer and homemaking education for the Syracuse, N.Y., school system from 1974-77.

She is currently vice president for public affairs for the American Home Economics Association and has served on the association's board for the past two years. From 1984-87, she has served as co-chair of a National Task Force on Faculty Development for Colleges of Agriculture for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Simerly holds a bachelor of science degree in home economics education from James Madison University, and earned her masters in home economics education and her doctorate in vocational-technical educational administration from the University of Tennessee.
