

UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA CAMPUSES 1987

NUDEAL

Party Name: NUdeal
Candidates: President Richard Burke, First Vice President Darrin Lindquist and Second Vice President Darin Werkmeister.

Main Goals:
To end underrepresentation of East Campus students; to work for a policy that would allow alcohol on campus.

- Platform:
- Include senate seats for undeclared students, minorities, foreign students, the Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic and the Residence Hall Association.
 - Supports appointing regents and a student-regent vote.
 - Supports orientation programs for foreign and transfer students.
 - Supports allowing residence-hall floors to extend visitation hours.
 - Supports student involvement in the downtown renovation project.
 - Opposes videotaped classes.

Campaign Quote:
"The point is that anyone can write a platform and we're especially proud of ours. This year, though, look beyond the issues and focus on the type of leadership this university needs to start it back on the path of excellence." — Burke

idence Hall Association

Frog candidate Doug Jensen said he thinks too many people have been in the ASUN Senate for too long and declared, "It's time for some new blood."

Andrew Wupper, HUGE second vice presidential candidate, said he and his running mates plan to have cheese-and-cracker nights on Wednesdays and start a "date-an-exec" program.

March 4 — Sponsored by the Ag Advisory Board

Unite presidential candidate, Andy Pollock, said ASUN meetings should be made worthwhile to encourage members to attend. He promised to have dedicated people working on ASUN and a strict attendance policy.

Anthony Meyers, TREK presidential candidate, said communication between City and East campuses should be improved through personal visits by representatives.

March 9 — Sponsored by the Gay Lesbian Student Association

Burke (NUDeal) emphasize the importance of AIDS education: "A lot of people don't realize that heterosexuals can get AIDS."

Pollock (Unite) said his party supports a non-discrimination clause that would prevent discrimination based on sexual orientation. He said people need to build a healthy respect for gay and lesbian students.

Jensen (FROG) said FROG supports funding the GLSA "because they pay student fees just like the rest of us."

Dyneke (AIM) said policy doesn't need to be changed; people's attitudes need the adjustment. Changing a policy won't end the discrimination, he said.

Anthony Meyers (TREK) said his party supports minority representation in legislation but doesn't want to see other groups trampled on. As Spock would say: "The needs of the many outweigh the needs of the few," Meyers said.

Rodney Bell, GLSA president said he supported the NUDeal because he trusts party members to be fair.

March 9 — Sponsored by ASUN

Pollock (Unite) said his party would represent all students even though there are no minorities or women running on the executive ticket.

Burke (NUDeal) said his party would support a plan to get regents appointed. He said efforts to gain a student-regent vote have failed in the past because people see students as uncontrollable and unpredictable.

Dyneke (AIM) said ASUN should be the watchdog of quality education and needs to voice students' opinions.

Steve Showalter (HUGE) said a vote for HUGE would boost their egos and students should make HUGE "the supreme sovereign lords of this university."

Ballot lets students decide on A, B fees

Every semester UNL students pay more than $100 in student fees, and every ASUN election, students have a chance to electorally approve or disapprove of their fee usage.

For the last five years the ASUN ballot has contained surveys on Fund B — the non-refundable portion of the student fees — and a referendum on Fund A — the refundable portion of fees. The surveys will appear on Wednesday's ASUN ballot.

As the ballot states, the survey on Fund B "is strictly a survey which will help enable ASUN representatives to further realize student sentiment on student fees."

Organizations under Fund B are the debt service, the University Health Center, the Nebraska Unions, and recreation programs and facilities.

Last year $18 per student per semester went to the debt service. The debt service pays back bonds that were issued for construction projects for the Nebraska City and East unions and the health center.

Students paid $47.92 each semester to the University Health Center. The health center provides in- and out-patient medical services at an often substantially reduced rate to students, said Dr. Gerald Fleischli, medical director of the health center.

Last year the Nebraska Unions received $23.82 from each student per semester.

Last year, $9.38 each semester went toward recreation programs and facilities. These fees are used for programs, buildings and fields used by the Office of Campus Recreation for student recreation.

While the Fund B survey is not technically binding, authorization from the students is needed for ASUN to recommend allocation of money from Fund A to organizations, said Jim Griesen, vice chancellor of student affairs.

Organizations included in Fund A are the Daily Nebraskan, University Program Council Talks and Topics and the Nebraska State Student Association.

The Daily Nebraskan is printed five days a week with a circulation of 16,500. Students paid 97¢ for the Daily Nebraskan last year, but this year the Daily Nebraskan is requesting a one time increase to $1.70 to purchase a computer system.

UPC Talks and Topics received 49¢ per semester last year. Talks and Topics brings in local and national speakers like Jesse Jackson and Geraldo Rivera to campus.

NSSA received 50¢ each semester last year, but this year ASUN passed a bill recommending no fees be collected for it next year. NSSA's goal is to promote quality, accessible, public higher education for Nebraska citizens.
