NOFAG wants normal campus Plans include having Dr. Ruth conduct good-sex seminars

Nebraskans Organized for Advancement of Government announced themselves as write-in candidates for the ASUN elections at Sandy's bar, 1348 O St. Monday night.

Party members sat around a table and presented its platform to a Daily Nebraskan reporter, the bartender, Mike, who wasn't paying attention; and one supporter, Dan Glazier from Syracuse, N.Y., who said he came in just for the event.

Nebraskans Organized For Advancement of Government (NOFAG) has set up its platform on the idea that homosexuality should be prevented on campus.

Second vice-presidential candidate Timothy "Texas" Burke, a fifth-year senior in health administration, said the party was set up primarily because of the amount of publicity gays have been given on campus.

"Homosexuality is not a normal thing," Burke said. "There was no Adam and Adam. It should be prevented and considered ill."

Presidential candidate Eric "Montana" Lambert, a fourth-year business administration major, said that NOFAG would try to prevent money from student fees from being allotted to the Gay/Lesbian Student Association.

"We can't justify giving these troubled people student fees because they make up less than 10 percent of the student population," Lambert said. Instead, Lambert said, NOFAG would give the money to varsity athletes who devote so much of their time to the university.

First vice-presidential candidate Andy "Colorado" Ketterson, a fifth-year senior in health administration, said that if GLSA cannot be prevented from receiving student fees, NOFAG would set up a heterosexual student group to receive 10 times as much funding as the homosexual student group.

Burke said to promote the prevention of sexually transmitted diseases and the spread of homosexuality, NOFAG would distribute sanitary paper toilet covers across the university.

Lambert said that "out of generosity" NOFAG would set up programs in connection with the health center to promote "good sex." Lambert also said they would bring in speakers such as Dr. Ruth Westheimer to provide "good-sex" programs.

Burke said one of the important aspects of NOFAG's platform is that all three candidates have different religious backgrounds and were able to conclude together that homosexuality is unnatural.

"Our Chinese and Puritan forefathers did not have AIDS," Burke said. "We seek to put these people back into the closet from whence they came."

NOFAG would also lobby for separate living units for homosexuals to prevent the spread of AIDS.

Ketterson said NOFAG waited to announce their candidacy because they felt the best way to get a write-in vote would be to have an announcement in the paper as close to the election as possible. NOFAG said that although other issues are important, they were more concerned about students' health.

Lambert said voting for NOFAG would be voting for the health of the students. "A healthy body is a healthy mind," said Lambert, "and we need healthy minds at the university."

Call-a-thon gets senior pledges for display off to a good start

The Nebraska Student Foundation made $5,555 in donations on the first night of its call-a-thon for the 1987 senior gift.

Student Foundation volunteers and hired callers of the NU foundation have begun eight days of calling UNL seniors Monday. They will continue calling between 6 and 10 p.m. through Thursday and Monday through Thursday next week.

Callers are asking anyone graduating with a bachelor's degree during 1987 to pledge $10 the first year and $30 each year for the next three years to a new North American Indian display in Morrill Hall. A majority of students voted on a mail-in survey last month to support the Morrill Hall project.

The Student Foundation's goal is $55,000 in pledges. Last year $37,000 was raised for two endowments to enhance UNL's libraries.

Steve Forney, call-a-thon co-chairman, said the amount of money pledged Monday per man hour was nearly twice the amount pledged the first night last year.
