Symposium presents family topics

More than 100 sessions and workshops will be presented at the 10th Annual National Symposium on Building Family Strengths. The symposium will be May 13 through 15 at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, 33rd and Holdrege streets.

Topics will include strengthening marriages, parents, families with young children and with adolescents, families with special needs, stepfamilies and rural families. Other topics include the relationships of families to the church, schools, the work place, counseling, therapy and community programs.

It is cosponsored by the UNL Department of Human Development and the Family and the UNL Department of Conferences and Institutes.

Keynote speakers will include Carl-fred B. Broderick, professor of sociology and executive director of the Marriage and Family Therapy Training Program at the University of Southern California; John D. Klenk, director of the issues analysis staff in the office of the Undersecretary of the U.S. Department of Education; Hedda Bluestone Sharan, associate producer of "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood"; Lynn A. Barnett, associate professor of leisure studies at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign; James L. Kern, an educational consultant from Jelm, Wyo.; and Robert Anastas, founder and executive director of Students Against Drunk Driving.

Registration for the three-day symposium is $110, which includes printed materials, three luncheons and coffee breaks. A one-day fee is $9, and evening banquet tickets are $12 each.

Frat to hang up date-rape posters

Next fall, the UNL chapter of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity will distribute posters on campus about date rape. Jeff Paulsen, the chapter's president, said that the posters are meant to make people more aware of the problem. The posters depict an ancient Greek scene of a man carrying away a woman against her will. The slogan at the bottom says, "Today's Greeks call it date rape."

"We just want to make people aware of the consequences and that it is a problem that has to be stopped," Paulsen said.

The fraternity plans to put the posters in Greek houses, dormitories and other public places where they would be difficult to take.

"The posters won't help if they get torn down or put in someone's room," Paulsen said.

The poster was created in August 1985 and was pictured in Time magazine in March.
