

Salt Valley lakes lure Lincoln anglers

For many Nebraskans, going one-on-one with a largemouth bass or a channel catfish is synonymous with heaven.

Weekend trips to Lake McConaughy or the Harlan County Reservoir in western Nebraska, the Missouri River or one of the hundreds of lakes and reservoirs in Kansas and Missouri have become annual summer pilgrimages for thousands of fishing lovers from all over Nebraska.

For Lincoln-area anglers, the trips don't have to be so far. At least a dozen Salt Valley lakes lie within 25 miles of Lincoln. Maps to area lakes are available at most local bait shops and sporting goods stores.

Some of the most popular and widely-used Salt Valley lakes include:

Branched Oak. Largemouth bass, walleye, northern pike, and channel catfish are plentiful in this lake just northwest of Lincoln, and fishing is good throughout the summer.

Pawnee. Bullhead, channel catfish, and bluegill fishing is best during the summer months. The best baits for these are worms and prepared baits. During the spring and fall months, largemouth bass and walleye fishing is at its best. Artificial lures are effective with largemouths and walleyes.

Twin Lakes Refuge. Largemouth bass, bluegill, channel catfish, northern pike, and walleye are stocked. Since the area is a refuge, it is closed to all access from Oct. 1 to April 1.

Yankee Hill. Largemouth bass, walleye, bluegill, northern pike, channel catfish, and bullhead are present and can be caught throughout the spring, summer and fall.

Bluestem. Throughout the early spring and fall months walleye and largemouth bass can be caught in the upper end of the lake. Northern pike, channel catfish, and bluegill are frequent throughout the entire lake during the summer months.

Olive Creek. Largemouth bass, channel catfish, and bluegill are present.

Wagon Train. Bluegill, Northern pike, and channel catfish are good throughout the entire summer. Worms, minnows and artificial lures are the most effective baits.

Stagecoach. Channel catfish and bluegill are plentiful during the summer months, while largemouth bass, walleye and northern pike fishing is good during the early spring and fall months.

Hedgefield. Largemouth bass fishing is prominent in the spring and fall months, while channel catfish, walleye, bullheads and bluegill fishing is good for the entire summer.

Conestoga. Walleye and largemouth bass fishing is above average throughout the spring months and during the fall, while crappie and channel catfish can be caught throughout the summer.

Fishing licenses, available at most convenience and grocery stores for $10, are required to fish Nebraska lakes and rivers. There are various bag limits for different kinds of fish. Bag-limit information may be obtained from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission or from fishing guides distributed at bait shops and outlets where licenses are sold.
