

'87 prolific year for history professors

By Linda Bendixen
Staff Reporter

The history department at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln made some history of its own this year. Ten professors in the department had books published in 1987. One of these professors and two others will have books published this year. Benjamin G. Rader, chairman of the department, said it is the first time so many books were produced in one year. Typically, he said, there are only five or six.

"It's unusually high output," he said. "I doubt that any other history department in the country had that many in 1987."

Most of the books are scholarly works. Topics range from politics to prostitution, from the 14th century to the 20th.

Rader said the books improve the status of the university, indicating scholarship and a high level of talent within the department.

The status of the authors also improves. Professors may receive royalties of up to $500. In addition, the university may award merit salary increases.

Researching topics can take years, and authors often travel to foreign countries. Rader estimated at least half the authors traveled to Europe or South America to do research.

The university has provided support for research, Rader said, with the research council granting professors leaves of absence.

But because of budget cuts, he said, research council leaves have disappeared.

"Unless they are restored, I anticipate a decline in the number of publications," he said.

"We stand in danger of losing some of the people if salaries don't improve," he said. "I expect to lose some."

The authors and their books are: Lloyd E. Ambrosius, "Woodrow Wilson and the American Diplomatic Tradition: The Treaty Fight in Perspective"; Peter Bergmann,

"Nietzsche: The Last Antipolitical German"; Esther S. Cope, "Politics without Parliaments, 1629-1640"; Dane K. Kennedy, "Islands of White: Settler Society and Culture in Kenya and Southern Rhodesia, 1889-1939"; Frederick C. Luebke, "Germans in Brazil: A Comparative History of Cultural Conflict During World War I"; Luebke with Gary E. Moulton and Frances W. Kaye, editors: "Mapping the North American Plains: Essays in the History of Cartography"; Thomas C. Mackey, "Red Lights Out: A Legal History of Prostitution, Disorderly Houses and Vice Districts, 1870-1917"; Timothy R. Mahoney, "River Towns in the Great West: The Structure of Provincial Urbanization in the American Midwest, 1820-1870"; Moulton, editor: "The Journals of the Lewis & Clark Expedition," vols. 3 and 4"; David Nicholas, "The Metamorphosis of a Medieval City: Ghent in the Age of the Artevelde"; Ralph H. Vigil, "Alonso de Zorita, Royal Judge and Christian Humanist, 1512-1585."

Books to be published in 1988 include: David L. Cahan, "An Institute for an Empire: The Physikalisch-Technische Reichsanstalt in Imperial Germany"; David Nicholas, "The Van Artevelde of Ghent: The Varieties of Vendetta and the Hero in History"; and Kenneth J. Winkle, "The Politics of Community: Migration and Politics in Antebellum Ohio."

Ins and outs of drop/add explained

From Staff Reports

Standing in line signals a new semester at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Students needing to drop or add classes can line up today at 8 a.m. outside the Nebraska Union Centennial Room.

According to Ted Pfeifer, director of Registration and Records, many students have been returning to drop/add more frequently than in the past.

"We see a lot of repeaters these days," Pfeifer said. "Students are coming back shopping for open courses."

Because drop and add is a hectic time for both UNL students and employees, Pfeifer said, students should pay attention to make sure a course is open or have completed a permission request form before they attempt to go through drop/add.

Students who are not familiar with the drop/add process should go to the Administration Building to obtain a drop/add information sheet.

Time appointment cards are available in the Administration Building at Service Counter 111G. Appointment cards must be presented to drop or add classes.

Students should go to the Bursar Station at the designated time and pay a $5 drop/add fee.

Students should consult the open course lists to make sure the course they want is available.

Pfeifer said graduating seniors who cannot get classes they need should go to the necessary department to get entrance permission or work something else out.

Pfeifer said the departments should be sensitive to the needs of seniors.

Free van service replaces LTS's evening shuttle bus

By William Lauer
Staff Reporter

The night shuttle bus service between the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East and City campuses has been changed to free van service because of low ridership.

Andy Pollock, president of the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska, said ridership was "low enough we needed to change the service, but high enough we needed it to continue."

This semester the shuttle bus has been replaced with a 15-passenger van operated by the university. The service will be free to students who present a current UNL student ID.

The van will stop at Lyman Hall on City Campus and Burr-Fedde Hall on East Campus according to class schedules. The service will not operate on Fridays. Students may pick up a shuttle schedule at residence halls or the Nebraska unions.

Night bus service was reimplemented last semester. A survey of night classes conducted by ASUN in the fall of 1986 estimated 1,116 students would use the service each week. Night bus service was discontinued in 1979 because of low ridership.

Patrick Barrett, assistant manager of the University Automobile Rental Pool, estimated the cost of the service for the spring semester to be about $2,400.

Pollock said students know from last semester that the service is available and can use it instead of looking for other transportation.

"Starting off at this time of year it has a lot better chance of success," Pollock said. But if the ridership remains the same "we probably won't implement it next fall," Pollock said.

There are no plans to change the day bus service between campuses.

Pay the 'new' price? Nah...

Have you seen the new prices on textbooks for second semester? Not too cheap, huh. Well, Nebraska Bookstore has a solution to those high prices—used textbooks. That's right. Buying used texts saves you 25% of the cost of new textbooks. Of course, we can't guarantee we'll have a used textbook for all of your courses, but we do carry more used books than any other campus store. So your chances of finding a used text are better at Nebraska Bookstore. Even our new textbooks are discounted 5%. Either way, you save. And you can pay the 'new' price somewhere else.
