After another one of my 18-hour days, it is a true pleasure to sit down with my 22 Scorpion albums and mash heads. After society has had its run of me, Klaus Meine's vocals crack me into the twilight zone. Any time another album is due out shortly, there is gleeful anticipation affecting my breathing and hearing. Forget about the new upstarts such as Celtic Frost. The Scorpions are true homo sapiens, and they make me feel proud to stammer and spit in my apartment. To ruin only three sets of speakers on Scorpions records must be some sort of world record. At last count, my buddy Bruno had ruined eight pairs of speakers and is now reduced to riding his sister's Western Flyer.

But as we metalheads go, you know we can't get enough of the stuff. Michael Schenker's little bro, Rudolf, still sets fire to my heart with his awesome guitar playing.

It makes me feel good to get that leather on and start airing it with all the Scorpions' standard-bearing songs, which are too numerous to mention. Anyway, after strapping my leather on and filling my Escort with Scorpions stuff, it is time to become a weekend warrior and hope what's out there is good tonight. Thank God for the Scorpions. Who knows what anyone would do without them.

Go headbang!
