

Four Cornhusker seniors to play last home game tonight

By Mike Kluck
Staff Reporter

Four seniors on the Nebraska men's basketball team will be making their final home appearance tonight when the Cornhuskers take on Kansas State at 7:35.

Senior guard Henry T. Buchanan and forwards Jeff Rekeweg, Derrick Vick and Bill Johnson will make the game against the Wildcats their last at the Bob Devaney Sports Center unless Nebraska receives a post-season tournament bid.

Nebraska coach Danny Nee said the seniors will be missed.

"They are just four quality guys," Nee said. "They have had success not just on the basketball court, but also in the classroom and with people. These are all-around five-star guys."

The seniors agreed that although this season's 13-15 record disappoints them, they consider this year a success in building a quality basketball program at Nebraska.

Buchanan, a transfer from Hutchinson (Kan.) Community College, said his success at Nebraska comes from being named to the academic all-Big Eight team and graduating this December.

Nee said Buchanan was the first black basketball player at Nebraska to be named to the academic all-Big Eight team. Buchanan said the honor was his best achievement during his two-year career at Nebraska.

"Basketball is what got me here, but to get my degree and be able to work has been my goal," Buchanan said. "I feel pretty good about it. There are very few things that a person can be first at an institution, and it is just a great feeling to have done it."

"It is my best accomplishment since I have been living, and it is noticeable and will help me in the near future."

Vick, a starter who played on last year's 21-12 team, said the bright spots of his two-year career included the Huskers' third-place finish in the National Invitation Tournament last season and the last-second shot he made in overtime to give Nebraska an 83-81 victory against Kansas last year.

Rekeweg said that although the highlight of his two-year career included defeating Kansas 70-68, he hopes for a new highlight in one of Nebraska's final games.

Nee said the success of the seniors came in the classroom as well as on the basketball court. He said all four seniors have been working toward their degrees and will graduate by next December.

Nee said tonight's game should be emotional for the seniors because it is important to them to go out as winners.

"It is emotional for me because these are my guys and my first group I recruited at Nebraska," Nee said.

Buchanan, Vick and Rekeweg agreed that they would like to end their home careers with a win. But they also said they are not looking at tonight's game as their last.

"We are going to take this game like we have taken every other game this year," Buchanan said.
