Woodwind quintet to perform works by famous composers

By Mick Dyer
Senior Reporter

The Prairie Wind Quintet, one of Lincoln's newest professional chamber groups, will present the first part of their Spring 1988 Concert Series at 8 p.m. Friday at Grace Lutheran Church, 22nd and Washington streets.

Concert Preview

The concert will feature some of the first music written specifically for a woodwind quintet.

Works by such notable wind composers as French oboist and inventor Henri Brod and Czechoslovakian composer Anton Reicha will be performed.

Pieces by Giuseppe Cambini, an Italian emigre and contemporary of Brod and Reicha, also will be performed.

The evening will begin with a light overture by the 20th-century composer Hedwige Chretien.

The Prairie Wind Quintet consists of April Stevenson, flute; Melisa Knoll, clarinet; Karen Sandene, bassoon; Susan LaFever, horn; and John L. Walker, oboe.

Walker is a doctor of musical arts student at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. LaFever will complete her master of music studies at UNL this May.

Tickets will be available at the door. They are $5 for adults, and $3 for students and children under 12. The second part of the Spring Concert Series will be performed at Grace Lutheran Church on May 27.

Literary magazine announces 1987 writing award winners

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln's literary magazine, Prairie Schooner, has announced four writing prizes for 1987, each worth $500, including the new Virginia Faulkner Award for Excellence in Writing.

The new prize was awarded to Howard Nemerov for his memorial tribute, "Loren Eiseley 1907-1977," a poem, "The Revised Version," (both from the fall, 1987 issue) and for "On Weldon Kees," an essay which appeared in winter, 1987.

Nemerov is a professor of English at Washington University in St. Louis and winner of the Pulitzer Prize for Poetry, the National Book Award, the Bollingen Prize and many others.

The recipient of the Bernice Slose Award for best work by a beginning writer is Kathleen Hill for her story

"Solstice" from the spring, 1987 issue.

Hill is a teacher and writer from New York City.

The Lawrence Foundation Award for the best short story published in 1987's Prairie Schooner goes to Lynne Sharon Schwartz for "What I Did for Love," which appeared in summer, 1987. Schwartz is the author of two novels and four books.

Patricia Goedicke is the winner of the Prairie Schooner Strousse Award given for the best poem or group of poems published during the year. A group of Goedicke's five winning poems appeared in the winter, 1987 issue of the magazine. Goedicke teaches creative writing at the University of Montana and has eight books of poetry published.

servants in the house or out to the chauffeur in the carriage house.

The kitchen usually isn't shown to visitors because it has many modern appliances in it. Neither are the basement or the top floor. These rooms are eerily deserted, without furniture or rugs.

The carriage house can be seen from the kitchen.

"Bigger than most houses," as Zephier said, the garage had room for a butler's apartment and several vehicles.
