Greeks on a stick

Getting closer to the sun, Todd Fecner and Melissa Meyer sit on top of a pole in front of the Phi Gamma Delta house to raise money for abused children. Each group takes a one-hour shift for 100 hours in hopes of raising $500 to $800.

Six elected to 4-H offices

Six University of Nebraska-Lincoln 4-H members, recently elected as national officers, are hoping to increase club membership nationally.

Delegates from 37 other clubs throughout the United States elected the slate of UNL candidates last Sunday at the national conference of the National Collegiate 4-H Organization.

Newly elected president Steve Nelson, a mechanized agricultural senior, said he and other candidates gave a presentation at the conference explaining their goals and aspirations for the club.

Don Siffering, adviser to UNL's 4-H chapter, said that as president of the National Collegiate 4-H Organization, Nelson will be responsible for giving administrative leadership to more than 50 different clubs on campuses across the country and coordinating regional activities.

Nelson said the new officers will revise the 4-H organization on the national level. He said he hopes to collaborate more with the national adviser, Steve Mullen, who works with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C., to start the changes.

Some of Nelson's goals for the future of 4-H are to gain more emphasis on its national service project, which is child-abuse prevention, and more publicity locally and nationally of the organizations. Nelson also plans to develop an alumni group for the organization.

The Lincoln chapter of 4-H will attend the national conference next fall in Washington, D.C., and the national congress in Chicago in November, Nelson said. The club will sponsor workshops dealing with leadership and publicity of the 4-H organization at the convention.

Siffering said the new officers will be responsible for planning the 15th annual national convention, which will be in Washington, D.C., the first time in April 1989. He said the first National Collegiate 4-H Conference was in Nebraska in 1973.

Siffering said Nebraska presented a slate of officers at the conference evaluation and planning session in October at Brookings, S.D. The slate was approved at the session and then presented for election at the national conference in Brookings last Thursday through Saturday, he said.

UNL 4-H members elected at the conference were Nelson; Business Manager Darin Hubbard, junior electrical engineering major, Secretary Robin Sawyer, junior English and speech communication major; Publicity Director Mitch Mason, freshman agricultural economics major; and Steering Committee Coordinator Loren Isom, sophomore agriculture business major.

Sawyer will also be editor of the organization's newsletter.
