

Seniors pledge 50 grand for class gift

University of Nebraska-Lincoln seniors have pledged more than $50,000 for a class gift benefitting the UNL libraries, said Steve Forney, president of the UNL Student Foundation.

The fund will be used to buy tele-facsimile and computerized compact disc database systems for Love Library on the City Campus and C.Y. Thompson Library on East Campus.

Seniors were contacted through a recent phone-a-thon conducted by the University of Nebraska Foundation.

Dohrmann cites pressure in athletics

he didn't get paid for four months. Except for a three-year tour of duty as a naval officer in World War II, Dohrmann remained with IBM in various marketing and executive positions for 34 years.

During the late 1950s, Dohrmann said, he returned to UNL to participate in the first master's degree program at the university.

Dohrmann has kept close ties with UNL as a member of the Nebraska Alumni Association Board of Directors. When he worked for IBM in Washington, D.C., Dohrmann was president of the Nebraska Alumni Club of Washington.

He is a member of the Nebraska chapter of the Football Hall of Fame, was the 70th honoree of the Lincoln Journal's Sports Hall of Fame and was selected for the 1962 Sports Illustrated Silver Anniversary All-America Award.

Dohrmann was presented the Alumni Achievement Award Saturday at the Wick Alumni Center during the 1988 Half Century Club Reunion sponsored by the UNL Alumni Association.

In 1938, Dohrmann played in the East-West Shrine game at San Francisco's Kezar Stadium. Dohrmann was awarded outstanding lineman of the game for catching seven passes — a record that wasn't broken until 1962.

Dohrmann has been chairman of the West player selection committee for the East-West Shrine Bowl for 10 years. He said the committee is now selecting players for the 64th game.

Dohrmann said the only thing that is the same about Cornhusker football is the fans. When the stadium held 30,000 people in 1938, 30,000 people filled the stands, Dohrmann said.

"Nebraska fans have always been great fans," he said.

UNL students can exchange books through ASUN

search for the books they want to buy, Correll said.

Correll said one problem of the book exchange is that students may not get their money for the books this semester because many people will not be buying their books until next semester.

"It's not quick, easy money like the bookstores give," Correll said, "but in the long run (students) can make more money by holding (their) books."

He said the idea behind the book exchange is to save students money.

"If you have a book that you bought for $30 and you only get $5 back," Correll said, "it would be worth saving it, and going (through the book exchange)."

Students can negotiate a price that will benefit both the seller and the buyer, Correll said.

A seller may get more money from another student than the bookstore, while the buyer may purchase the book at a lower price than he would get from the bookstore.

Although the bill to start the book exchange passed just recently, Correll said, he is satisfied with student response to the program.

"We've had a few students come in already, and they think it's a good idea," Correll said.

Correll said even though a similar type of book exchange failed five years ago, he is confident it will work this time. He said the biggest problem will be getting students to come in and fill out a card.

"It takes five minutes to come into the office and fill out a card, or to look and see if your book is available," Correll said. "I think that's worth more than taking $5 for your $30 book," he said.
