also be relieved, Beavers said, because minority and non-minority students would be interacting.

The minority representatives would not be the only minority link to ASUN, Beavers said. ASUN will continue to consider the opinions of individual groups, she said.

Petersen said he and Sen. Jeff

Gromosky, chairman of the Special Topics Committee, will meet with members of other student minority groups this week.

Petersen said ASUN will try to draft legislation that represents the opinions and suggestions of minority groups. He said he expects the minority bill to come before the senate next week or the following week.

Residence halls worker shortage spurs employment incentive

By Eve Nations
Staff Reporter

University of Nebraska-Lincoln residence halls are experiencing a shortage of food service workers because of a fast turnover rate, according to Douglas Rix, assistant director of housing and food service.

Rix said that while he is unsure how many workers the university needs, the current shortage has not changed significantly from last year.

"This time of year has a particularly high rate of turn over," he said. "Many students want to work and then they decide they don't want to work after all," Rix said.

Rix said another reason for the shortage is students' skepticism about their schedules.

"Many students expect to have their schedules one way and then they have to change things so they aren't able to work," he said.

Rix said no specific complex has more of a shortage than another complex.

"No dorm has a big shortage," he said. "Each one is short of some workers."

Cheryl Card, Cather-Pound-Neihardt food service manager, said her food service has a problem on lunch shifts.

"We have a little bit of a problem of student shortage over the lunch hour," Card said. "That is the hardest time we have to fill. Most students like to take classes during this time."

An incentive of a 15-cent raise per hour between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. is offered to those students who are willing to work over the lunch hour. All new employees have a starting pay of $3.85 an hour during normal meal hours.

Card said the management team has to work harder when there is a shortage of workers. The shortage does not affect the quality, she said.

"Quality is still there because we still want a good product for the student," she said.

Food service managers from Abel and Harper halls declined to comment on the situation.

Then get in on the ground floor in our Platoon Leaders Class program for college freshmen, sophomores and juniors. You could start planning on a career like the men in this ad have. And also have some great advantages like:

- Earning $100 a month during the school year
- As a freshman or sophomore, you could complete your basic training during two six-week summer sessions and earn more than $1200 during each session
- Juniors earn more than $2100 during one ten-week summer session

■ Seniors and graduates can be commissioned through the Officer Candidate Class Program

- You can take free civilian flying lessons
- You're commissioned upon graduation

If you're looking to move up quickly, look into the Marine Corps' commissioning programs. You could start off making more than $18,000 a year.

We're looking for a few good men.
