

Ex-Boston player sinks Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Dave Henderson, a former Boston postseason hero, singled home the tie-breaking run in the 8th inning and the Oakland Athletics beat the Red Sox 2-1 Wednesday in the first game of the American League playoffs.

A's outfielder Jose Canseco broke a scoreless game in the 4th with a solo home run. The score was 1-0 until the 7th inning as pitchers Dave Stewart of Oakland and Bruce Hurst of Boston hooked up in a pitching duel. But Wade Boggs hit a sacrifice fly to tie the game in the 7th, setting up Henderson's heroics on a chilly afternoon at Fenway Park.

Carney Lansford hit Hurst's first pitch in the 8th for a double and Henderson grounded the next pitch into right field for the go-ahead single.

Boston fans cheered for Henderson in the pre-game introductions. Henderson was Boston's savior in the 1986 playoffs against California. His home run rescued the Red Sox when they were one strike from elimination in Game 5, and Boston rallied to win the series. Henderson went on to bat .400 in the World Series loss to the New York Mets. He was traded to San Francisco midway through the next season.

Oakland's bullpen, which held Boston to three runs in 35 innings this year, did the job again and preserved the lead. Rick Honeycutt relieved Stewart with the bases loaded and one out in the 7th when Boggs hit his sacrifice fly.

Boggs — a .373 career hitter with the bases loaded — struck out in the 2nd. It was Boggs' first strike out in 22 lifetime at-bats against Stewart.

Dennis Eckersley, another former Boston star, finished for the A's with two shutout innings. Eckersley, who won 20 games as a starter for the Red Sox in 1978, led the majors with 45 saves this season and Oakland's bullpen had a record 64 saves.
