

'Level-headed' Grant leads NU

"You have to have that kind of support against the wishbone," Thorell said. "If you don't get any support from your safety on the option, it's going to be a long afternoon."

Carmer said the Nebraska defense did not make any adjustments after Air Force scored its two touchdowns.

"We just remembered what coach said about them beating us the past two years," Carmer said. "It kind of got to us."

Following the Falcon score, Nebraska moved to the Air Force 20-yard line in the second quarter, but missed a field goal. This time, Nebraska marched from its 22-yard line to the Air Force seven before fumbling.

One of the reasons Nebraska had trouble sustaining a long drive, but had so many big plays instead was because of Air Force's blitzing tactics. Air Force made seven tackles for 46 yards in losses and blitzed many times throughout the game. Thorell said Grant helped Nebraska make its big plays by calling the right audibles at the right times. "We audibled quite a bit, and (Grant) did a good job of audibling," Thorell said. "They did bring some pressure which made us change the play we had called. (Grant) is a level-headed guy."

Grant said he audibled on Baldwin's second-quarter touchdown run. He said he audibled a lot during the game.

"I could see what was going to happen," Grant said. "I could see where they would blitz and then we could pick it apart."

Nebraska burned Air Force's blitzing defense for a touchdown early in the third quarter. The Huskers lined up in a power-I formation, and Grant rolled left. He then threw back across the field to the right sideline to a wide-open Hays, who had been lined up in the Husker backfield, for a 40-yard touchdown pass, with 13:17 left to play.

Thorell said the Husker junior varsity had run that pass play during its game against the Nebraska redshirts last month, and it also worked against them.

Nebraska iced the game six minutes later when Grant scampered 72 yards down the left sideline to the Falcon six-yard line on an option play. Baldwin, who led the Huskers with 134 yards rushing, scored on the next play, giving Nebraska a 35-16 lead.

Grant said he was disappointed that he got caught shy of the goalline on his long run. He said the option had been open all day long, but he failed to take advantage of it until the fourth quarter. Grant, who threw for 86 yards and rushed for 83 more, said he has not been happy with how he has played yet this season.

"I haven't played a perfect game yet," Grant said.

Thorell said he was happy to get the win because of all the experience Air Force had and because Nebraska finally had a tough game. The Falcons started 14 sophomores and one junior against Nebraska.

Women's tennis team uses tournament to get rid of those 'freshman jitters'

With a young team that's without a senior, the fall season is important for the Nebraska women's tennis team, Cornhusker coach Gregg Calvin said.

The Huskers took advantage of the Husker Invitational, which was held Friday and Saturday at the East Campus, Woods Park and Cather-Pound courts, to gain some college playing experience and rid themselves of the "freshman jitters," Calvin said.

"The fall season is a good experience for the team because we can work on strategies and play a lot of matches," Calvin said. "Everyone got to play at least six matches and gained some good experience on our home courts," Calvin said.

No team scores were kept in the tournament.

Nebraska used three freshmen, four sophomores and one junior in the starting lineup, Calvin said.

Calvin said he was especially pleased with Nebraska's team performance because each individual played close matches against solid players.

"We played against some good players and that showed our team where their weaknesses are," Calvin said. "We have some good college experience now and now we have to get back to practice and work on our weak points."

Calvin said the Huskers were plagued by injuries during the tournament.

"The injuries affected our play," Calvin said. "But injuries are just part of the game and you have to hang in there and do the best that you can."

Junior Doneta Holmen suffered a severe ankle sprain on Friday and could not continue after her 1st singles match of the tournament. Earlier Friday, Holmen teamed with Nancy Tyggum in the No. 1 doubles competition. Holmen and Tyggum were defeated 6-3, 5-7, 7-5, by Minnesota's Ann Gorde and Tanya Brigttag.

Freshman Kathrin Edelkottter, the Huskers' No. 1 singles player, also suffered a sprained ankle that slowed her performance, Calvin said. Edelkottter lost her 1st match Friday to Iowa's Liz Canzoroni 7-6, 6-7, 7-2. She came back to win her 2nd match against Arkansas' JoAnn Varnum 7-6, 4-6, 6-3. On Saturday, Edelkottter lost to Marijke Nel of Kansas State, 7-6, 4-6, 7-5.

Edelkottter teamed with Ildiko Guba to win the No. 2 doubles competition. Edelkottter and Guba defeated Iowa's Tracey Donnelly and Tracy Paxton 6-1, 6-3 on Friday. On Saturday, the Husker tandem defeated Patty Burbidge and Sonja Panajotovic of Colorado 6-2, 6-2 for the title.

Guba, a sophomore from Budapest, Hungary, won the No. 2 singles competition by defeating Minnesota's Sofie Olsson 6-4, 6-1.

Husker freshmen Leslie Sue Jones and Rachel Collins finished 5th in the No. 3 doubles competition. The duo defeated Colorado's Susan Osterlund and Elke Schaumberg 6-2, 6-2 on Saturday.

In the No. 4 singles competition, Tyggum reached the finals, where she lost to Donnelly 6-1, 6-1.

Jones finished in 7th place at No. 5 singles by defeating Toni Tanaqually of Wichita State, 6-1, 6-3.

Collins finished in 5th place in the No. 6 singles competition by defeating Lisa Dick of Minnesota, 6-2, 6-3. Husker sophomore Claudia Gandini finished in 7th place in No. 7 singles by defeating Colorado's Katie Woods 6-4, 6-4.

Calvin said the toughest teams were probably Minnesota and Arkansas. Minnesota placed three singles players in the finals, Calvin said.

Calvin said Nebraska will play Arkansas in a spring dual meet and said he expects the Huskers to give the Razorbacks a battle.

"We needed to play tough teams and get match tough," Calvin said.

Nebraska will travel to Boulder, Colo., next weekend to compete in the Colorado Invitational.
