Most rape cases involve an acquaintance

Joy and John were having a good time at a fraternity party. His jokes made her laugh. She had a great smile. They read the same books, watched the same movies.

But, when John invited Joy to his room, they found they differed on one thing: sex.

Although John and Joy are fictitious names, the scenario is a common one on college campuses, said Marcee Metzger. Metzger is an interpersonal violence counselor for Residential Education at UNL.

The majority of sexual assaults are committed by someone the victim knows, not a stranger, said Metzger.

Metzger said victims of 14 sexual assaults were referred to her this semester, all were on a date or with an acquaintance.

In half of those instances, Metzger said, the victim was forced to have sex.

In a panic, she said, some victims consider dropping out of school.

But what the majority of victims fail to do most, is report the incident to the police.

"Ninety-nine percent of the women I see don't want to go to the police," Metzger said.

Metzger said victims avoid police for many reasons.

The victim doesn't want anyone to know about the assault, Metzger said. She just wants to forget about it.

Fear exists that reporting the assault will prevent the perpetrator, who also happens to be a friend or acquaintance, from getting a job, Metzger said.

Metzger said victims also fear that the person who assaulted them may come back to hurt them.

Another fear, Metzger said, is that the assault will be highly publicized and cause the victim unneeded stress.

When someone is physically hurt, Metzger doesn't report the assault for the victim, she said.

"I serve as an advocate for the victim and although I encourage them to report the assault," she said. "It is their decision."

coln Police Department has no reported cases of first degree sexual assault yet this fall, said Cpl. Larry Kalkowski, Crime Prevention Bureau for the UNL Police Department. Two cases of 3rd-degree sexual assault have been reported this semester, he said.

Kalkowski said he encourages women to report any sexual assault that occurs.

As a police officer, he said, "I can only deal with assaults that are directly reported."

According to the FBI, one of every 10 rapes by strangers is reported compared to one in every 25 when the rape is by an acquaintance, Kalkowski said.

Nan Hynes, program coordinator for the Rape-Abuse Crisis Center, said victims of acquaintance rape fail to report the incident because they fear they won't be believed.

Victims believe the absence of a gun, knife or other weapon, disqualifies the unwanted sexual activity from being an assault, Hynes said.

When coercion, either physical or emotional, is used, sexual assault has occurred and the weapon being used is sex, Kalkowski said.

"Regardless," he said, "of who did it."

No victor found at LA face-off

Four University of Nebraska-Lincoln political science professors said there was no victor in Thursday night's presidential debate.

Vice president George Bush, the Republican nominee for president, and Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, his Democratic opponent, debated for 90 minutes in Los Angeles.

The candidates sparred on the economy, defense spending, taxes and which issues the campaign should focus on.

"I think both of them did well," said Michael Steinman. "It was a pretty even affair."

Bill Avery agreed with this assessment.

"I don't think there was a winner," he said. "Both candidates made their points."

John Hibbing said because of the standstill in determining a winner in the debate, Bush will inevitably come out on top because Dukakis was behind in the polls.

David Forsythe also said there was

Problems cause parade changes

By Mike Kluck

Spectators who previously watched the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Homecoming parade along O Street will have to find a new place to station themselves tonight.

Traffic and scheduling problems in recent years have caused the time and route of the 1988 Homecoming parade to change, said Bryan Valencia, chairman of the University Programs Council Homecoming Committee.

This year, the parade begins in the loop on the east side of Memorial Stadium, heads south on 14th Street to U Street and then east to 16th Street. On 16th Street, the parade heads south to R Street and then west to 13th Street. The parade turns south to Q Street and then west to 10th Street where it heads north to U Street, ending on the west side of Memorial Stadium.

The parade will not travel on O Street this year because of problems in past years, he said.

"The reason behind the change was because we always had trouble with starting the parade earlier," Valencia said. "This year we wanted to try and start the parade earlier by staying off O (Street)."

This year, the parade is scheduled to begin at 6:15 p.m.

Valencia said that in the past, an earlier start wasn't possible because the Lincoln Police Department would not close O Street to traffic until a later time.

The new route avoids traffic problems of the past, he said. Previously, Valencia said, the parade moved against the flow of traffic on 16th Street requiring the police department to leave a lane open.

Valencia said in previous years, it began to get dark toward the end of the parade. He said he hopes the earlier start will avoid that problem.

Valencia said he expects parade spectators to go directly to other Homecoming activities. Shuttle buses will run between the parade route and the sports center between 6 and 8 p.m. Activities include a carnival from 3 to 11 p.m. Friday in the parking lot south of the Bob Devaney Sports Center, gymnastics and swimming/diving exhibitions at 8 p.m., wrestling exhibitions at 9:30 p.m. in the sports center and the official start of the Nebraska basketball season with a scrimmage at the sports center at 12:01 a.m. Saturday.
