Plans for unions anniversary finalized by the union board

By Shawn Hubbell
 Staff Reporter

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln Union Board Tuesday put the final touches on celebration plans for the 50th anniversary of the Nebraska Union next week.

The week-long celebration begins with a 50th anniversary party Monday from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the main lounge of the union. "1938-88, Continuing a Tradition of Service to UNL," will be the theme.

Pat Wyatt, Union Board president, said he is pleased with the way plans for the celebration are proceeding.

"I'm just convinced this week will be everything we anticipated it to be," Wyatt said.

As of Tuesday, 27 team applications had been received for entry in the "Win, Lose or Draw" tournament, Wyatt said. The tournament is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. next Tuesday. Pairings for the tournament will be posted this Thursday in the main lounge of the union, Wyatt said.

The celebration continues Wednesday night when the Union Board, in conjunction with the University Program Council, presents special guest speaker Adrian Cronauer. Cronauer is the radio disc jockey whose work in Vietnam inspired the movie "Good Morning Vietnam."

Cronauer will discuss his experiences as a disc jockey in Vietnam at 7 p.m. Wednesday. Wyatt said a press conference with Cronauer is scheduled for 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Small concerts and other live entertainment will be held next Thursday afternoon in the Nebraska Union's Crib, Wyatt said.

The week-long celebration will conclude with the Nebraska vs. Missouri football game Oct. 29. Pre-game activities are scheduled to take place in the union.

Policy evaluated

ing, he said, smokers don't know where to put out their cigarettes and "ground them out on the floor."

The only person Kuhn has had to ask to put out a cigarette was one of his friends, he said.

Usually, he said, strangers don't know about the smoking policy. On football Saturdays, Kuhn said, he sees many people with lit cigarettes inside the union. He said that on those days, however, the crowd is usually too large for him to get to the person in time.

'The world's going up by population or nuclear war and we're concerned with smoking.'

—Vigil

Kuhn, a smoker, said the policy has had a positive effect on him. He said he is smoking fewer cigarettes since the policy went into effect.

"I used to smoke in my office," he said. "Now I only smoke (in the office) after the whole office closes, and I'm staying late."

He said the policy allows him to smoke in his individual office as long as he has a charcoal filter unit to suck in the smoke.

Ralph Vigil, a history professor, said he spent $100 on a new air filter for his office and placed signs that say "smoking is permitted" so he could smoke in it.

Paul Podany, a junior electrical engineering major, said he smoked one day while he walked through the union.

"But I haven't done anything deviant yet," he said.

Podany also said he is "sick of everyone bitching" about the smoking policy.

He said he doesn't think the policy has caused people to adjust their schedules so they can have a cigarette.

Some think smokers are becoming a new American minority.

"I think the philosophy has changed," Kuhn said. "We used to be concerned with smoker's rights and now the non-smoker has priority if his rights are violated."

"It's (no-smoking policy) a senseless middle-class fad that has little rationality," Vigil said.

"Americans have attempted to make people like me a pariah, as if I'm rather stupid," he said.

Not smoking "allegedly creates better health," Vigil said, but he thinks the American public should focus on issues such as chemical dumps, nuclear war and the pesticides farmers use on food.

"It's ridiculous," he said. "The world's going up by population or nuclear war and we're concerned with smoking."

"This shows that there are more important things to worry about than whether people smoke," he said.

Vigil also said he would sympathize with people if they smoked where they shouldn't.
