High turnout in pivotal Israeli Election

JERUSALEM — An exit poll Tuesday night indicated the right-wing Likud bloc has the best chance of gaining control after an election fought on the issues of rebellion in the occupied lands and peace with the Arabs.

For the deeply divided nation of 4.4 million, whose 40-year history is a calendar of war and violence, Tuesday's election was a crossroad in the future of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt 21 years ago.

Israel television said its poll was based on interviews with about 20,000 voters at 46 polling stations.

It said results indicated Likud, led by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, and the center-left Labor Party of Foreign Minister Shimon Peres would win 40 seats each, but Likud would have the edge in forming a coalition with small religious and nationalist parties.

In seats, the TV poll predicted the right would have 62 of the 120 in the Knesset, or parliament, and the left would get 58. The interviews were conducted two hours before the polls closed at 10 p.m. (3 p.m. EST).

Independent pollster Hanoch Smith also said the exit poll showed Shamir "definitely in a better position."

Finance Minister Moshe Nissim proclaimed at Likud headquarters in Tel Aviv: "Yitzhak Shamir will form the next government." If the exit poll "reflects the reality, it's clear that Labor has no coalition to block the Likud," Nissim said.

Throng of Israelis voted in an atmosphere of violence created by the 11-month-old Palestinian rebellion coupled with a sudden outburst of attacks on Jewish civilians.

Politicians from both left and right said the attacks on civilians in recent days would help Likud, which wants to keep the occupied lands, and hurt Labor, which is willing to return some territory.

About 80 percent of the 2.9 million eligible voters turned out, reflecting the galvanizing effect of the rebellion, which has cost the lives of 10 Israelis and more than 300 Palestinians since it began Dec. 8, 1987.

A huge force of 13,000 police and other security personnel protected the 4,800 voting stations. The army sealed off the occupied territories, where the 1.5 million Palestinian residents conducted a general strike.

No significant results were expected until Wednesday and a vote as close as predicted could mean a wait of days, at least, to learn whether either major party could form a coalition.

Bush campaigns like president-to-be

George Bush campaigned like a president-to-be Tuesday, saying he hoped for a meeting with Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev soon after moving into the Oval Office. Democrat Michael Dukakis said "Made in America" was the only label he cared about as he bid for union support.

The polls one week before Election Day showed Bush a solid leader, and the contrast in campaign styles between the front-runner and the underdog couldn't have been plainer.

The vice president struck an above-the-fray pose in a speech at the University of Notre Dame, saying he wanted to meet Gorbachev for a "serious and direct examination" of superpower relations.

Dukakis was in the political trenches, blending his appeal for blue collar support with an attack on alleged Republican influence peddling.

His aides said their private polls pointed to a race that was narrowing. Privately, some Democrats expressed doubts, while ABC said its survey of California showed Bush a leader by seven points in the nation's biggest state.

President Reagan was on the road for the benefit of Bush and other Republicans, ripping into Dukakis for describing himself as a liberal in the mold of Roosevelt and Truman. Dukakis is no "Harry Truman and he's no FDR," the outgoing president said.
