

Student support keeps Abel pool open

By Jeff Beals
Staff Reporter

Despite the findings of a rate study, the Residence Hall Association voted to keep the pool in Abel Hall open.

"The support for the pool was overwhelming," said Doug Breuer, chairman of the residential enhancement committee.

Closing the pool was one option presented to RHA members Thursday in a rate study to save students money.

The Residential Enhancement Committee and the University Housing Division conducted the study to propose the housing budget for the 1989-90 academic year, Breuer said.

RHA approved the rate study's proposed housing cost increases, Breuer said.

The cost for double-occupancy rooms will increase by 5.2 percent or $120. Single-occupancy rooms will increase by 6.2 percent or $170. This increase is 1 percent smaller than last year's, he said.

Breuer said he brought up the idea of closing the Abel pool because it was losing money and because students were paying for other pools on campus through student fees.

Presently, residence hall students pay $6.52 per academic year to keep the pool operating, Breuer said.

"We looked around town and found that almost every pool loses money," he said. "The (RHA) Senate just felt that we would keep it open as a service to the residents."

RHA Publicity Chairman Bill Vobejda said some residents thought that the RHA Senate would make a sudden decision on closing the pool.

"We would consult the residents first before we would actually close the pool," Vobejda said. "If anything, we probably would have started a study to see if we should look at closing it in the future."

Another part of the rate study included changing the residence hall linen service. Breuer said linen will be an optional service next year. Students who want linen service will have to pay about $12 to $14 per year.

Breuer said linen was cut from the budget because 40 percent of the students never use it.

"Linen will cost a few more dollars," he said, "but I don't think people will be too concerned."

RHA decided to increase housing contract fees 50 cents from $5.50 to $6 for next year, Breuer said. That money goes to individual complex governments to support entertainment, he said.

Vobejda said the 50 cents is not part of the housing cost increase. He said that RHA will receive 50 cents more from the total housing budget.
