Sherrill wins opera competition

From Staff Reports
The Nebraska district of the Metropolitan Opera will send Donald Sherrill to the regional competition in Minneapolis Feb. 7. Twenty-nine-year-old Sherrill, a bass-baritone, won Sunday's local Metropolitan Opera National Council auditions. About 200 people attended the auditions at the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery Sunday. "It's the most people we've ever had at one of these," said Barbara Dinsdale, publicity chair of the event. Dinsdale attributed good weather and publicity to the "success" of the four-hour event.

Tiffany returns with new sound; forces DN to present new quiz

the hammer on the gun. "It's been far too long."

I closed my eyes, waiting for Tiffany to pull the trigger and end my young life.

My mind flashed back to last spring when I created the Tiffany quiz for our readers. I had expected a flood of responses to the quiz that would prove to Tiffany that she was a loved and respected musician among the campus community. Unfortunately, only four people bothered to take the quiz and mail it in.

Tiffany was devastated and she blamed me for the quiz's failure. She left me in tears and, since then, I had been trying to put her out of my mind.

"T-T-Tiffany," I stammered. "I tried..."

"Save it, worm," she said, pressing the gun barrel against my forehead. "I don't want to hear your pitiful excuses. I just want you to rectify your wrongs."

"Make another quiz," she said. "There is a new Tiffany now. I have a new album, a new voice and I am a legal adult in charge of my own career. I want everyone to know it. Make a new quiz for DN readers or feel the pain of hot lead searing through your brain."

"But Tiffany," I objected. "My editors and our readers will think I'm an uncreative moron who has to fall back on stale ideas that weren't that funny to begin with."

"So," she said. "What's new?" She then noticed my Walkman.

"Jim, I hope you're listening to my new album on your headphones."

"Uh, no," I mumbled, certain that my life would soon be over. "It's Debbie Gibson."

In the wink of an eye, she ripped the Walkman from my hip, threw it into the air and blew it to pieces with one quick shot. She moved the tip of the hot barrel to her lips and blew the away the smoke, just like in the movies.

I gulped audibly. She grinned audibly. I realized I was at her mercy. Not caring to feel hot lead in my brain, I agreed to write a new quiz.

Here is the new Tiffany quiz. Please do not let me down. Complete the quiz and mail it to me at the Daily Nebraskan office, 34 Nebraska Union. Tiffany is back -- and she means business.
