Senators delay nursing bill, agree to reconsider Feb. 22

than ever in the future.

As a result, Smith said the state will need to find incentives to attract more people to the nursing

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood said Nelson's intentions for the Bill are good, but that the bill is "bad public policy."

Schmit said he doesn't think the bill would help to ease the nursing shortage in the state because it doesn't address the problem of low salaries.

'The nursing profession is underpaid and overworked," Schmit said. "We all know that."

Schmit said there won't be more nurses in rural communities until salaries are increased.

Part of the reason rural communities are having problems is be-cause many people in these communities go to hospitals in larger cities for medical care, he said.

The decision to delay the bill came after Sens. Don Wesely of Lincoln and Rod Johnson of Sutton and others said they wanted to hear LB520, another bill that addresses the nursing issue.

LB520 creates a Nursing Incentive Fund, which would reimburse nursing students for loans taken in college for up to $2,000 per year if the student goes on to practice nursing in the state. Students who agree to practice in rural areas would receive an additional $1,000 per year as a student.

said she presented a photocopy of the pictures and a cover letter from Hanson that accompanied the book.

'I explained to Reba that . . . the historical society's director is not appointed by the governor, and is therefore not directly accountable to the governor," Rex said.

White Shirt said the letter Hanson sent to senators told of ancient Pawnee rituals including sacrificing

The bottom line that the intent was to discredit Pawnee religion," White Shirt said.

Chambers said there is growing concern within the Legislature about the society's lobbying tactics. He said two employees of the society have approached senators to plead the society's case.

Hanson said three society employees have been presenting information to senators

Gene Crump, deputy attorney general of Nebraska, said that under current law, employees of state agencies and institutions, like the historical society, can go to the Capitol to inform senators on issues without being registered lobbyists.

In the technical sense it probably is lobbying," Crump said. "But they're not required to register as lobbyists.'

Another bill, also sponsored by Chambers, would change that. LB151 would require state employces to register as lobbyists with the clerk of the Legislature.

> Hanson said that because the society's employees are allowed by law to lobby senators, there should be no question of the ethics of their practices. Supporters of LB340 are spending about $55,000 for eight lobbyists, he said, so the society should have some way to defend its position.

"Frankly, I don't have $55,000 to hire eight lobbyists to work against the people who are working against us," Hanson said. "This seems like an amazing underdog situation.

Attempts to discredit the society's lobbyists are designed to pull attention away from the real issues of LB340, Hanson said.

"I have grown weary of the constant efforts to distract attention from the bill," he said.
