like plain hamburgers and ones without onions. Remember, at Burger King you can have it done your way.

About the elevator . . . it was big, stainless steel and waiting for us. We looked at it. It looked at us. We looked at it again. Visions of Glenn Close and Michael Douglas came into our minds and we fled for the nearest stairs.

The stairs . . . wide, relentless, up. We cautiously started our way toward the top. What's behind door number one? Before we had the chance to find out we heard footsteps. EEEEEEEEEEEEEKKKKK! Horror movie . . . run for your lives before that mass murderer (or in this case, the custodial staff) catches up with you.

We wound up in the University Bookstore, which is another horror story in itself. Scary thing number one: All manner of folk buying late valentines for all manner of guilty reasons. Scary thing number two: the health and beauty corner of the bookstore. Imposter perfumes sit on the shelves next to shoe polish. But the worst was yet to come. The condom display. To the left were Band-Aids. To the right were Bianca Blast, toothbrushes, paste and mouth wash. And below, were Vaseline, K-Y jelly and suntan lotion. Does this mean something?

We felt sick, so we repaired to the bathrooms by the DN to relieve ourselves. For those not in the know, the basement bathrooms are experiences not to be missed. Kind of like a high school locker room in miniature, these babies have stalls with full-length doors, lockers, benches, a shower stall and even the musty whiff of left-over sweat. Part two of the game room from the main level is cornered on the opposite side of the basement. When the big time gets to be too much, video game/pinball addicts can retire to the quiet solitude of the basement.

And through the doorway is the union pool hall -- cleaner than most, a pleasant atmosphere to be sure. In addition to pool, there are other escapes from all the intellectually stimulating activity students encounter such as checkers. As with the other televisions on campus, one can catch up on their talk shows.

To the opposite extreme is the highest point in the union: two meeting rooms on the fourth floor -- yes, there is a fourth. Through two doorways on the third floor -- one next to the dental hygiene club -- one can venture up to the clouds. They're just rooms. You can see a lot of Lincoln from the dormer windows up there, but not as good as you can from the Nebraska Capitol.

Thus ends the tour of the underside -- with a little on top -- of the union. Feel free to explore and learn, that's what we're here for.
