Former Nebraska linebacker Peter Buchanan was drafted by the Canadian Football League's Hamilton Tigercats. Buchanan was selected in the seventh round, and was the 51st player taken overall.

Buchanan was slated to be selected earlier in the draft, which was

Buchanan said he began thinking about the CFL during a self-de-scribed frustrating season this year. He said he felt frustrated because he did not see much playing time even though he practiced well.

Buchanan began his college foot-ball at Hastings College. But after two years with the Broncos, he transferred to Nebraska in the fall of 1986.

He said he was sure the move to the Big Eight was the right thing to Mike McCarthy, Hamilton's assistant general manager and director of player personnel, said Buchanan's performance at the evaluation camp made up for his lack of playing time at Nebraska.

"He performed well at the evaluation camp," McCarthy said. "We got a chance to see things you can't see on film; speed, agility, strength."

Buchanan will report to Hamilton,

McCarthy said. "Coming from Nebraska, he's well schooled in funda-

Oklahoma probation raises ticket costs Faculty tickets cost $10, while stu- enough." By Steve Sipple

Staff Reporter

Nebraska football fans will feel the impact of recent NCAA sanctions against the Oklahoma and Oklahoma State football programs next season.

Tickets for Nebraska's home game against Oklahoma will cost the public $25, instead of the regular $18.50, Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney announced Wednes-day. The increase will last just one

"The increase is because the fact we'll lose as much as $500,000 from Oklahoma and Oklahoma State being on probation," Devaney said. "The charge is a one-time deal to help recoup from the losses so we don't have to do any fund raising."

UNL faculty and student ticket rices will remain the same, said Joe Selig, Nebraska's ticket manager.

dents will pay $7. Selig said Nebraska's athletic department stands to make about 350,000 from the increase.

The majority of Nebraska's finan-cial losses will be the result of television and bowl restrictions imposed against Oklahoma and Oklahoma State. Oklahoma is banned from television next season and Oklahoma

State for the next two years.
In addition, Oklahoma is ineligible for postseason bowl games for the next two years and Oklahoma State the next three.

Big Eight schools share television and bowl game revenue.

Devaney said the price increase for the general public is unfortunate. But he said he's pleased that faculty and students won't be affected.

"We don't want to listen to those folks holler," Devaney said. "The general public will yell loud

Devaney said he doesn't expect the price hike to affect ticket sales for the Oklahoma game, which has traditionally sold out despite being televised nationwide.

'With the game not being on television, people will be selling tickets for more than $25," Devaney said. "We hope folks appreciate what we're doing and why. We're just trying to stay alive."

Nebraska fans shouldn't feel too discouraged, Devaney said. A few Big Eight schools charge more for home games against Nebraska than they do for other league opponents. For instance, Colorado charges $22.50 per general admission ticket for its game in Boulder, Colo., against the Cornhuskers. Ticket prices at Colorado are $17.50 against Oklahoma and $15 for other league
