

DN funding approved, polling sites fail

ing us!" Hamilton said. "But on the other hand, this is not a popularity contest, because in that case we will lose."

Despite the increase in support, most students who voted did not approve of student fees going to COLAGE.

"I voted against COLAGE funding," said Lynn Hansen, sophomore in general studies, after leaving the polls Wednesday.

"Although the campus deserves to be educated about homosexuals, (COLAGE) doesn't deserve to be funded," she said. "We don't fund left-handed people and we don't fund heterosexuals."

Tim Thorson, Cather-Pound president, said the number of people expressing support for the installation of condom machines was unexpectedly low.

"If the residence hall students solely had been polled, the number would have been higher," he said, "due to the fact that there has been an overwhelming support of condom machines by hall residents."

Nevertheless, RHA senator J. Matt Wickless said the degree of support given for condom machines will help the campaign to install the machines.

"It obviously says something about student concerns," he said. "It's going to have a positive effect on the regents' decision."

Jay Proskovec, junior theater major, said he voted to install condom machines because of the many benefits they would provide.

"It's more private than walking up in a store and buying one," he said. "It's the '80s. Birth control should be purchased. I think the university should do all it can to support that."

ASUN Electoral Commission Director Mark Fahleson said students' rejection of additional ASUN polling sites next year is due largely to the clause stating that they might cause an increase in student fees.

"I think we did the best job possible in getting voter turnout on this campus," he said. "I think the (low) voter turnout had to do with other things besides the number of polling places."

Leslie Ciani, senior home economics major, said she voted against adding new polling sites because there are already enough on campus.

"If you can't make it to one of the polling sites, you must not have a strong desire to vote," she said.

Although 79.9 percent of students approved of student fees going to the Daily Nebraskan, some disagreed.

"I don't particularly enjoy the paper that much," said Craig Knepfer, a senior civil engineering major. "It's the editorial attitude that kind of expels me a little."

Several students who voted against the ASUN amendment to run the second vice president on the same slate as the ASUN president said they did so because it would restrict the voters' choice.

"I think they should all be separate, because they could have one good person and one dork," said Tay Fulcher, sophomore in chemical engineering. "I wouldn't want the dork to get voted in."

RHA election produces runoff

By Eric Pfanner
Staff Reporter

Even though twice as many voters as last year turned out Wednesday for RHA elections, the Residence Hall Association will have to hold a runoff election for executive positions since no executive candidate from IMAGE, ADVANCE or TRUTH got more than 50 percent of the vote.

J. Matt Wickless, IMAGE presidential candidate and Larry Koubsky, ADVANCE presidential candidate will compete in the RHA runoff. The runoff for vice president will be between Eric Aspengren of ADVANCE, and Tim Thorson of IMAGE.

"I kind of figured it might happen (the runoff), because there were three parties," Koubsky said.

The third party, TRUTH, pulled votes away from IMAGE and ADVANCE, Koubsky said, so that neither received a majority.

Wickless said he was "very happy" with the high voter turnout. He also challenged Koubsky to a debate before the runoff.

Koubsky said a debate with Wickless "might happen."

Cindy Kirstine, RHA election

commissioner, said percentages of the vote for executive candidates will not be released since this could affect the runoff results.

Kirstine said voter turnout was approximately 20 percent Wednesday, compared with 10 percent last year.

The runoff will be held "exactly as the regular election," she said, except that no write-in votes will be allowed.

Bill Vobejda, RHA election commissioner from Abel Hall, said RHA Bylaw X requires run-off elections to be held on the same day that a runoff for the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska election would be held. This would require RHA to hold the election next Wednesday.

But Vobejda said the Electoral Commission may challenge the bylaw in order to allow the runoff to be held Thursday, which would give the commission and candidates more time to prepare.

The Electoral Commission also announced that there will be a run-off election for RHA treasurer between Karen Schimonitz of ADVANCE and Paula Tank of IMAGE.

Commission: Campus action slow

down posters from polling places by 5 p.m. Tuesday.

The commission has no set policy for fining parties for violations, Fahleson said.

"We look at the severity of each one," he said.

When posters are hung in places where they shouldn't be, he said, the party is fined $5 per poster.

No policy exists for fining parties for violations involving stickers.

Aside from BEER's violations, Fahleson said, the number of violations in this year's election was "not out of the ordinary."

"Action on campus has been slow," he said. "There aren't the usual amounts of campaigners."

Fahleson said he was looking forward to the polls closing at 8 p.m. After that, he said, it didn't matter where the posters were.

Marlene Beyke, ASUN director of development, said that last year, ASUN voted to cancel the violation fines because all parties had about the same number of them.

There was no exact count of the number of violations, she said.
