Huskers to face Tigers

By Jerry Guenther
Staff Reporter

If past results are any indication, the Nebraska baseball team should snap a two-game losing streak when it faces Fort Hays State this weekend.

Nebraska, 4-2, will square off against the Tigers in a pair of double headers at Buck Beltzer Field. Saturday's action begins at noon, with Sunday's action starting at 12:30 p.m. University of Nebraska-Lincoln students who present their IDs will be admitted free on both days.

Nebraska coach John Sanders said the Cornhuskers are in a dangerous situation entering the contests. He said Fort Hays State has everything to gain, and little to lose.

Fort Hays State, 0-4, lost a pair of games to Nebraska last year by a combined score of 19-0.

The Huskers have lost a pair of games themselves this season, as they dropped a 4-1 decision to Arkansas on Sunday and suffered a 6-3 setback to Southwest Missouri State on Monday.

Sanders said he is confident that his team can halt its losing streak.

"We've always done pretty well (against Fort Hays State)," Sanders said, "but we should do well."

Sanders said he expect Fort Hays State to view its games against Nebraska as a chance to gain some recognition. The Tigers are a member of the Central States Conference of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

"They have Division I games to win, and not much to lose," he said. "Our responsibility is to just come in and get the job done."

Fort Hays State coach Steve Gillispie said the Tigers record isn't any of indication of how good his team is. One of Fort Hays State's losses this season was an 11-10 road setback to Wichita State. The Shockers are currently ranked 7th by Baseball America and 10th by ESPN.

"We actually should have won that game," Gillispie said. "That was our first time out on the field and we gave up five unearned runs."

Gillispie said the strength of his club this year has been hitting. Fort Hays State returns five position starters from last year's 15-23 team.

"If our pitching comes around, we're going to be very tough to beat because we're going to score some runs," Gillispie said.

Gillispie said even if Fort Hays State loses all four games this weekend, he will be satisfied if his team plays well.

"We just want to be respectable," he said. "It helps us down the road to see pitchers from teams like Wichita State and Nebraska."

Nebraska is scheduled to pitch senior Pat Leinen and Doug Tegtmeier, a sophomore flame thrower from Beatrice, on Saturday. On Sunday, the Huskers will start Mike Zajeski and Dale Kistaitis.

Decision to come to UNL was easy

By Jerry Guenther
Staff Reporter

For native New Yorker McGraw Milhaven, the decision to come to Nebraska to play baseball was an easy one.

Milhaven, a 6-foot-4 right-handed pitcher from Manhasset, N.Y., said he knew he wanted to get away from the East when he went to college.

"The last thing I think I wanted to do was stay home," Milhaven said. "I wanted to get out and see another place and I had heard that this place had the best laundry man around."

Milhaven said laundry is important to consider when choosing a college.

So far, Milhaven said, laundry man Leroy Roth has done a good job of cleaning his uniforms except for some occasional shrinkage and a few pink socks.

In a more serious remark, Milhaven said he was also impressed by the facilities and coaches during a recruiting trip to Nebraska. The other schools Milhaven considered attending were Notre Dame and Virginia Tech.

"My mom said to me, 'If you're going to play baseball in college, why don't you play at the best school that you can?'" Milhaven said. "And I thought, 'that makes sense,' so I chose Nebraska."

At Manhasset High School in Long Island, Milhaven earned 11 letters for participating in baseball, football and basketball. During his senior year in basketball, his team held the No. 1 ranking in USA Today until they lost their final game in the state championship.

In baseball during his senior year, Milhaven was selected to play in the 1985 Daily News All-Star game at Yankee Stadium where he pitched a scoreless inning.

Milhaven said he had to get used to some changes when he came to Nebraska.

"It's a lot slower place," he said. "I know everybody just says that, but it really is true."

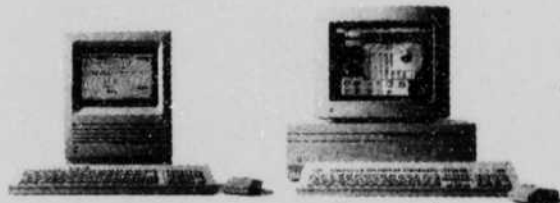

Another adjustment for Milhaven was buying shoes.

Milhaven, who wears a size 14, said that at Manhasset he always went to a store that specialized in clothes for big men. Now, he said, he usually has to order them specially.

Before he finishes his career at Nebraska, Milhaven said he and his teammates would like to win the Big Eight Championship.

"That's the next step for this program. After that, everything else will fall into place."
