

Petersen thanks high school administrators

By Brandon Loomis
Senior Reporter

ASUN President Jeff Petersen thanked Nebraska's high school counselors and faculty members Tuesday for their dedication and for his personal success in college.

Petersen was guest speaker at the state high school Principal-Counselor Conference in the Nebraska Union Ballroom. About 450 high school administrators and counselors attended.

Petersen said he avoided homework in high school and consequently his grades suffered. During his senior year, he said, a teacher and later a counselor told him how much potential he had and urged him to fulfill it.

During his first semester at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, he said, he took his teacher's advice and earned a 3.8 grade point average.

"I was finally living up to my potential," he said.

Petersen said he "vividly" remembered his teacher's encouragement when he won the student election last spring.

Petersen said school counselors also influenced him in his decision to attend UNL. He had wanted to attend an expensive school somewhere on the East Coast, he said, but counselors helped him make the right choice.

Because of its diverse opportunities and relatively low cost, Petersen said, UNL is "not just a good place to get an education, but a great place to learn about life."

Petersen said if anyone would have asked him in high school how important guidance counselors were, he probably would have said, "really about as much as my next door neighbor's dog."

But having seen their predictions come true and their words put to use, he said, he has changed his mind.

"On behalf of all the students at the university . . . thank you," Petersen told the counselors. "Each and every one of you has planted a seed in each and every student you've worked with . . . And I assure you the seed is growing."
