

Coach says team has chance to win all weekend matches

Paul Domeier
Reporter

With three home matches this weekend, the Nebraska women's tennis team has a chance to grab a top-five spot in the Big Eight entering next week's conference championships.

Nebraska coach Gregg Calvin said three matches are important even though he is not putting a lot of emphasis on team standings. He said team standings are incidental because all the Big Eight teams have not faced each other.

The Cornhuskers will attempt to correct that situation by facing three Big Eight teams. Nebraska will face Missouri on Saturday, Kansas on Sunday and Kansas State on Monday. The matches begin at 10 a.m. at the Cather-Pound courts.

Calvin said the Huskers want to use their match against Missouri as preparation for its Kansas and Kansas State matches. He said the Huskers want to join a growing list of teams that have beaten Missouri 9-0 this season.

Calvin said Kansas and Kansas State will provide tougher competition for Nebraska. The Huskers, along with Kansas, Kansas State, Oklahoma and Colorado, are battling for top seeds entering the Big Eight championships.

Kansas and Kansas State are good teams, Calvin said, but they have contrasting strengths. He said Eveline Hamers of Kansas is unbeaten at No. 1 singles, and the Jayhawks are also strong at No. 5 and 6 singles.

But Kansas' doubles teams aren't as good, he said.

"We can realistically hope for all three doubles," Calvin said.

Calvin said Kansas State is a balanced team that possesses stronger doubles play than Kansas. But the Wildcats aren't as strong at the top as Kansas, he said.

"We have a good chance to be up on them after singles," Calvin said.
