

Birds' feathers ruffled after ignorant remarks by Sell Morr

"All we do is fly, fly, fly," Crane cawed. "It would be nice to have a river of our own to call home. We leak a lot, ya know."

Crane said that Lark's accusations of lies on Belchson's part were totally false and misleading. He said he can't help it if the meadowlark is a short, squat bird with no future in Nebraska.

"If Gov.-lord No Morr is going to change this state to an industrial one, there won't be any meadows left to lark in, anyway," he chirped.

Lark retorted, saying that meadowlarks may be short, but at least they shave what little leg they have.

After a heated discussion that left many feathers ruffled, the two birds were shoed out of the chamber.

After the feathers were dusted, State Watchdog Burnin Flamers introduced an amendment to the bill. He suggested that the state bird be changed to the state animal, and that animal should be the highway squirrel.

rel.

"Hell, they draw more tourism than anything, even Gov.-lord Morr's husband's cookbook," Flamers said. Belchson retorted, asking Flamers how he came to that conclusion.

"Are you questioning my integrity?" Flamers fired. "Apparently, they love the highway squirrel. Why else would there be so many flattened on the roads? They just can't wait to come in contact with the little frisbees."

Gov.-lord Morr's husband, Sell Morr, said he thought Flamers' amendment was a good idea.

"I could include my world-famous recipe for Squirrel Waffles in my new cookbook," the second annoyance said.

But, he said, he didn't care what came of LBZOO, since he has discovered several recipes using all the animals in his wife's kingdom, Nebraska.

"No matter what happens, I have recipes for anything -- birds, squirrels and barnyard animals included. I can make all those critters delicacies, just check out my latest cookbook."

All the birds in the chamber flocked out of the state capsule after this comment.

Daily Half-asskin reporters tried to contact representatives from the squirrel groups, but they were too smashed to talk. (Go figure!)

No action was taken on the bill, but Sell Morr said he could use any bill in his latest recipe, Beak Paté.

Randsome fills capsule with lies and stupidities

Sin. Burnin Flamers distributed a list to the Nebraska Deadislature Friday of previously undisclosed hiring criteria for bored members of the Nebraska State Hysterical Society.

Much to the shagrin of Lame Randsome, the hysterical's chief bone horder, Flamers gave the list to sinators in an effort to have Randsome and all other bored hystericals removed from office.

Flamer's list included:

- that all members of the bored must be white "with no sympathy toward any other cultural, religious minority."

- that any women on the bored keep their mouths shut and "stand by their men."

- that all members must have been raised in the proper Anglo-Saxon church, the best schools and be members of the most prestigious and pompous groups Nebraska has to offer.

- that all members know 1,500 ways to wear polyester.

- that no one on the bored have any expertise or knowledge about the society's collection of Indian burial remains, preventing its legitimate study.

The list does state, however, that absolutely no bored member is required to recognize or understand the values of honesty, respect or compassion.

In a burst of typical nonsensical drivel, Randsome attempted to defend his list and himself.

"Dear sinators, this is just another attempt by Mr. Flamers to blow something I have done out of proportion," he said.

Flamers, who had been engrossed in his latest scheme to attract media attention, looked up from his work and calmly asked Randsome to repeat himself.

"Now don't get huffy Flamers, all I'm trying to do, is hire bored members consistent with this state's hysterical past who are capable of preserving that past and the future of my race."

"What race is that Randsome? Assholes?," Sen. Anus Back asked.

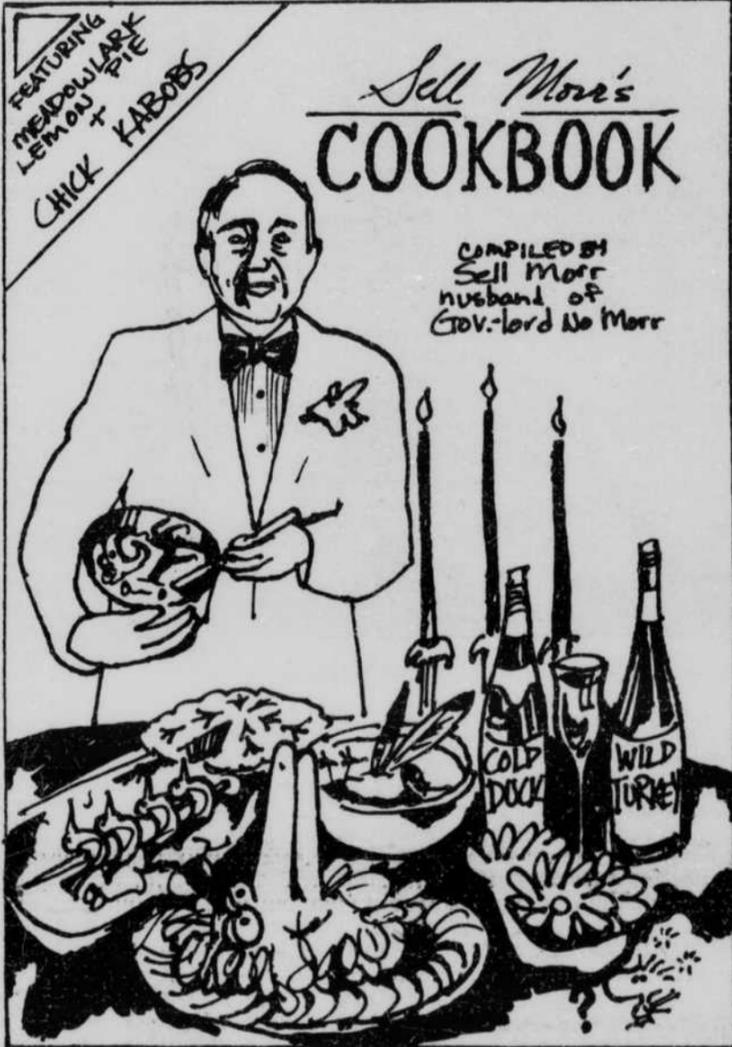

A fist fight between Back and Randsome ensued.

Flamers, seeing the photo opportunity, joined the brawl attempting to break it up.

Randsome, notorious for his immature behavior, threw a hissy after the two sinators had clobbered him some good ones.

He was asked to leave the state capsule or sinators would burn his book of propoganda that he had passed out earlier in the day.

Sinators postponed action on the list, leaving Randsome and his bored members hysterical for another day.

rage, however, when he began discussing the incompetence of the DH staffers.

"Those turds write racial slurs, show no respect for editors and do things covertly -- behind my back. Such scenes sicken me."

Wildly resigned shortly after his speech. His paper was the only one that attended the press conference.

In other business, ANUS sinators complained about First Vice President Late Eyeshurt's incompetence in his position.

ANUS sinators composed a rap song that exemplified their feelings for Eyeshurt.

"That guy makes us all look bad. He's always in a rut."

Except for his clothes, which are really rad. His knowledge is up his butt. That Eyeshurt guy has some serious trouble, when it comes to making sense. His slow proceedings make our meeting length double. At least his term is almost spent."

our five or six constitutions for elections of executives," Beer-Stein said. "I don't think the election really counted."

"Besides, we in the electoral fixing commission can interpret anything the way we want."

Beer-Stein said that since only one bylaw exists, which exists in 15 versions so nobody pays attention to it, the commission can do and say whatever. "But I don't know what to say or do," Beer-Stein said.

"Whatever," RHA sinators barked.

After much debate, Dickless and Whoreson promised to forget about implementing the bylaws, and to include the entire senate in future Burger King outings.

The senate voted unanimously to kill the impeachment motion.
