innovative.

Since Ward's cartoons were aimed at a television audience, he had neither the time nor money to create animation that would rival Disney's or Warner Brothers' ornate cartoons aimed at film audiences, according to the New York Times.

Ward developed a process called "limited animation." Characters barely moved and backgrounds had little detail.

With limited animation, cartoons could be produced faster and more time could be spent on the script, according to the Times. The limited animation process was used on cartoons from the mid-1960s to the 1970s.

Foray's versatile female voice was also uncommon in the early '60s. Hardly any women were doing voices for cartoons at that time, she said.

"I was sort of a phenomenon at the time," she said. "I was so utilitarian that they (studios) would call me and get any voice they wanted."

Foray, who recently did voices for "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?," is currently the voice of Grammy Gummi on the Saturday morning cartoon, "The Gummi Bears." She also does voices for Ma Beagle on "Duck Tales" and Jokey Smurf on "The Smurfs." She is scheduled to do voices for Matt Groening's Simpsons characters on Fox Network's "Tracy Ullman Show."

Foray said she has been doing voices since age 6. At the time, her elementary school teacher had a radio show and was not amused by the young girl's talents.

"She said she couldn't teach me anymore because I did more voices than she did," Foray said.

Editor's Note: Bullwinkle, Rocky, Mr. Peabody, Dudley Do-Right, George of the Jungle and friends will be honored at the Flatwater Festival in a retrospective of Ward's work at the Sheldon. Programs time are Friday at 1:15, 2:30, 3:45 and 7:30 p.m.; Saturday at noon, 2:30, and 3:45 p.m.; and Sunday at noon, 1:15 and 2:30 p.m.

June Foray will appear as guest speaker Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday at the 3:45 p.m. performance.
