

Student receives minor injury

Jeep crashes near Buck Beltzer

By Amie DeFrain
Staff Reporter

A University of Nebraska-Lincoln student was thrown from her jeep early Tuesday morning and received minor injuries, according to UNL police reports.

Sgt. Mylo Bushing of UNL police said Nicole E. Bilby, 22, of 1245 N. 16th St., received only a scrape on the back of her right hand when the 1981 Jeep CJ7 she was driving down Avery Street flipped on its right side.

Bushing said Bilby was driving south on Avery and near 11th St. at 1:57 a.m. when her jeep apparently went up over the curb and hit a guardrail located near Buck Beltzer Field.

The vehicle then scraped along the rail until the right rear tire blew, causing it to swerve across the street, overturn on its right side and then flip back onto its wheels.

Bushing said that after the accident, Bilby told the police she didn't remember everything that happened.

The report said she came around the corner, swerved to miss a car and went up over the curb.

A passer-by walking over the 10th street viaduct, Bushing said, heard the accident and then came to help Bilby.

The man, he said, apparently got in the driver's seat of the jeep and drove Bilby to the Chi Phi fraternity, her home for the summer. He then called the police.

Bushing said that after police were called, an officer and supervisor met the man and Bilby at Area 3 parking lot where the jeep had been parked, and then they drove in a cruiser back with the officers to where the accident occurred.

"She was really lucky to get out of that type of accident with the minor injuries she received," Bushing said.

The jeep received an estimated $700 in damage, Bushing said. No tickets were issued, he said.
