

Music makes waves in western pop world

Afro-Pop offers sampling of ethnic music

By Gretchen Boehr and Mark Lago Senior Reporters

African music has made big waves in the western pop music world recently...

brand of West African music and American rock is the relationship between the guitars. While American rock usually features a unified guitar sound...

the churches have grand pianos, and the lack of foreign currency in Guinea makes it difficult to get quality Western electronic instruments...

Thomas Mapfumo and The Blacks Unlimited are "very political," "His (Diabate's) songs are based on peace, love and social problems. He is calling peoples' consciences to pull together"

Zimbabwe, born out of the liberation struggle. "The sound is heavy," he said, "and the music is also danceable."
