

MTV Remote Control narrows field

MTV's Remote Control narrowed the field of 50 applicants Saturday to four contestants who will compete for a chance to be strapped into the "Wheel of Jeopardy" Tuesday night at Lincoln's Pershing Auditorium.

The four contestants selected are Chad Carr, Sarah Sheffloe, Brodrick Kennedy and Reynolds Towns, according to Melissa Keitges, MTV's University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus representative.

Keitges said nine "human television channels" who will appear on the show Tuesday night also were selected. They are Daniel Baye, Chris Bosh, Danny Hebda, Tony Heffner, Jason Miner, Julie Naughton, Fidel Nelson, Adrian Pountney and Kristen Zadroga. Jerry Zach was chosen as an alternate "channel."

Following the quizzes and the one-minute individual impression, the remaining 23 applicants played mock rounds of the game, resulting in the selection of the four semi-final contestants, she said.

Keitges said that to get to the "Wheel of Jeopardy," the four contestants will play regular Remote Control rounds. The two top contestants will go to the "Speed Round," and the winner then will go on to the "Wheel." If the contestant names 10 of 13 videos correctly, he or she will be flown to New York in December or January.

According to Lisa Silfen, manager of business and corporate publicity at MTV, the winner of Tuesday's show will compete in a "Remote Control" taping.

The audience will be involved in the action. When the on-stage contestants miss answers, the crowd will be allowed to win prizes for correct answers.

Keitges said in addition to show regulars Ken Ober and Colin Quinn, the show Tuesday will feature stand-up comedy and comic routines, all taking place in a mock dormitory room on stage.

alities and championships. It also houses items such as costumes from the vaudeville era and the original James L. Plimpton skate.

J.L. Plimpton, a native of Massachusetts, invented the "rocking skate" in 1863, which revolutionized the sport. Because the new invention enabled the skater to steer the skate by leaning to the left or right, the sport of skating began to grow. Plimpton also was responsible for opening the first public roller rink.

Most technological development in the roller skate occurred between 1863 and the 1880s. Besides Plimpton's contributions, ball bearings were the next notable contribution to the advancement of the skate. New materials, like synthetic wheels, now have improved the skate of the past.

From the two- and three-wheel skates to the combination roller and ice skate, the museum covers many spectrums of the sport. For the elderly skater, the museum displays an adult-size skate aid which is like a walker on wheels.

"Almost anyone can contribute to the museum's collection," Sorenson said. "A lot comes from the people in the industry and the competitive skaters."

Organized roller skating competition, which began in Europe and spread throughout the world, is represented at the museum by the many skates and uniforms worn by modern-day champions.

The Hall of Fame for the United States Amateur Confederation of Roller Skating displays items from the best skating competitors.

The museum is free and open to the public 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.
